Pennsylvania Grange Celebrates 125-Year History

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Janet Fishovitz of Freedom was named the Pennsylvania State Granger of the Year Tuesday during the 125th All-Granger Banquet at the Leesport Farmers Market in Leesport.

The awards banquet served as the climax of the rural organization's several days of festivities, contests and events held as part of its historic convention.

The banquet hall facility of the livestock and farm products auction business was filled by Grangers from around the state for the Tuesday buffet dinner and awards program.

For the days of the state organization's historic 125th anniversary convention leading up to the banquet, most activities occurred either at the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Reading, or at The Inn at Reading, which served as convention headquarters.

Twelve Berks County granges served as convention hosts and used the farmers market site as a change of venue. With the long banquet hall, and six long rows of end-to-end tables, a stage at one end and a buffet line at the other, the site seemed to suit well the 600 members in attendance.

State Grange Master William Steel served as master of ceremonies and welcomed the members, with Jean Hollabaugh providing the invocation prior to dinner.

Following the meal featuring roast beef fillets and crab cakes, as well as potato filling (a regional culinary specialty) and other side dishes, the program included a presentation from Tom Gajewski, a staff member for U.S. Rep. Tim Holden, who presented a proclamation from the U.S. House of Representatives recognizing the LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — At its annual banquet held at Willow Valley Convention Center on Tuesday evening, Lancaster County Poultry Association noted its accomplishments and offered a peep into promotional plans for the upcoming year.

Lancaster County Poultry Ambassador Kendra Weaver greeted the 350 members in attendance. She said, "Small family farms, especially poultry farms, are close to my heart since I come from one."

The 18-year-old daughter of Keith and JoAnne Weaver, who have a broiler operation in Reinholds, was presented with a $1,000 scholarship in appreciation for

United Voice Raised For Homestead Exemption

EVERETT NEWSWANGER

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County commissioners called a news conference Thursday morning to present united support for a "yes" vote on the Homestead Exemption referendum that will be on Pennsylvania's ballots next Tuesday.

All the commissioners, Paul Thibault, vice chairman, who conducted the news conference, Terry Kauffman, chairman, and Ron Ford, agreed that the present method of using only real estate taxes to raise county revenues was unfair and antiquated. They emphasized that if an affirmative vote is not achieved now, the Lancaster Farming Turns 42!

Lancaster Farming began to appear in rural mailboxes in southeast Pennsylvania 42 years ago on Nov. 4, 1955. Every week since then Lancaster Farming has supplied farm news, advertising, market and production reports, regular columns, and special features to our growing number of loyal rural readers. Today, farmers and agri-industry representatives really depend on us for the farm news each week. Thanks!

Fall harvest is well under way, with reports of crop yields greatly varied across the region because of weather conditions. For example, in areas of south central Pennsylvania, the corn crop is almost a total loss, while the southeast part of the state has only 20 to 30 percent lower yields. Maryland also has great variation from county to county. In some fields the stalks were shorter, but the ears filled out, making better silage than normal.

For J. R. Arnold, Jefferson, Md., driving the tractor in the photo, the crop was very poor. In fact, it took the corn planted in the spring a month to sprout, and for most of the year the crop was expected to be a total loss. But on Tuesday, Arnold was harvesting the corn on Joe Long's farm, and the field was at least providing some forage. Of course, it took many more acres than usual to fill the silos. Many farmers have already started to purchase forages in anticipation of shortages next spring. The photo was taken along Rt. 180, looking north, just west of Jefferson, Md., at the junction of Rt. 383. Jefferson View Farm, owned by Charles C. Smith & Sons, can be seen in the background. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids finished slightly higher at close Wednesday, supported by fair overnight export sales and indications that additional sales are in the works. Corn and soybean bids continued to decline as fall harvest resumed after recent wet weather in the Midwest. Additional profit taking on the board was also a weakening factor. Good overnight sales of corn and soybeans, limited losses. Wheat 1 to 3 cents higher. Corn 2 to 9 cents lower. Sorghum 2 to 5 cents lower. Soybeans 1 to 8 cents lower.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NOVEMBER 3-9, 1997

ALL SOULS, NOVEMBER 3.

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

Once again, on November 4, Americans have a chance to display their national pride or national apathy, as the case may be Election Day seems to bring out the best and the worst in us, whether we're politicians or voters In our country, women vote in greater numbers than men, and whites more often than blacks or Hispanics Yet, with the exception of Switzerland, American voters get to the polls in smaller percentages than in any other industrialized country, according to recent voter-turnout studies

The cost of freedom is always high, but Americans have always paid it.

– John F Kennedy

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ To clear the sinuses and help prevent the common cold, add horseradish and/or raw garlic to your diet.

VERMONT FARM SANDWICH

2 slices whole wheat bread brown mustard
horseradish
sliced roast beef or other meat raw yellow onion, sliced
cheddar cheese

Spread one piece of bread lavishly with mustard, and the other with a good half-inch layer of horseradish Add the meat, a couple slices of onion, and a good, thick piece of cheddar cheese. Put it all together, and serve with apple cider (hot or cold) or hot ginger tea According to one Vermont farmer we know, a daily lunch of this is the best cold preventative there is!

Makes 1 serving.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When the clouds appear like rocks and towers, the Earth's refreshed by frequent showers.

Set trees at Allhallontide (first week of November) and command them to prosper; set them after Candlemas (Feb. 2) and entreat them to grow.

OPINION

Homestead Exemption: Vote On Tuesday

In the primary election this coming week, November 4, farmers have a real reason to vote. The stage is set for property tax reform, which is of special significance to farmers who have a great part of their equity tied up in their farmstead.

The Homestead Exemption will appear on Pennsylvania ballots as "Joint Resolution 1997-1," and according to Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, property tax reform will be a dead issue for a long time to come if this resolution is turned down.

If passed, it will amend the state constitution to permit enactment of legislation exempting a portion of a home's assessed property value from taxation. It would pave the way for townships, boroughs and cities, school districts, and counties, to reduce taxes on residential property. The exemption would not change a home's market value.

For farmers, passage of the Homestead Exemption is especially critical. It has been documented that farmers pay a disproportionate share of property taxes because of the land and buildings needed to operate their businesses. To make matters worse, property taxes keep increasing. They shot up an average of 108 percent in Pennsylvania from 1984 to 1994. While the proposed exemption would apply only to a taxpayer's home, we strongly believe it should be and will be expanded by the General Assembly to include buildings on the home farm. That would bring a large measure of tax relief to farmers.

If you want to see the opportunity for your property taxes to be lowered, you will need to go to the polls on Tuesday and vote. Without a "yes" vote, tax reform in Pennsylvania cannot begin. The issue is now up to you.

To Check Corn Harvesting Losses

Reducing harvesting losses is one sure way to improve profits, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent Experts agree that no matter how well the combine is adjusted or operated, field losses will occur

An acceptable loss is considered to be three per cent An average of 5 kernels per square foot with a 120 bushel per acre yield or 8 kernels per square foot with a 175 bushel per acre yield would be equal to a three per cent field loss. On average, 1 5 kernels per square foot is equal to one bushel per acre loss

Take a walk through your fields now and determine what the average kernels per square foot is This should be done across the entire width of one combine pass at several locations in the field Then determine the reason for the losses and make corrections for next year

To Control Rodents

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reminds us mice and other rodents take a heavy toll on corn stored as ear corn in wooden and metal corn cribs

The corn crib provides an ideal habitat for these rodents It provides sheltered nesting areas out of the cold winter weather along with an endless food supply. The control of mice and rats under these conditions is very difficult However, there are several things you can do to help keep rodent populations down

First, traps may be used to monitor the extent of the problem Trapping alone will do little to eliminate the problem

Second, screening where ever possible to exclude rodents will also help to keep numbers in control. When a severe problems exists, the commercial use of tracking powder has been the most effective means of eradication. Make sure you read and follow all the label directions when using pesticides

To Care For Older Horses

If you own older horses, make sure they are in good physical condition before winter sets in, according to Chester Hughes, Lancaster County Extension Livestock Agent Older horses are not efficient as they once were in digesting food During cold weather, these horses need extra energy to keep warm. So, have them gain weight and get in good condition before winter.

A horse is in good condition when you cannot see its ribs and have to apply slight pressure to feel the ribs as you move your hand over them.

Older horses need high quality soft hay Legume hays are better than grass hays because they provide more energy, protein, vitamins and minerals. If your older horse is not in good condition feed it three to six pounds of grain or commercial feed daily.

If the horse is too thin, you may need to feed it greater amounts If you feed more than six pounds of grain, feed twice a day A pellet feed may help if the horse has a chewing problem A vitamin and mineral supplement also may help an aged horse

Editor:

I recently read an article in the October 11, 1997 issue of your paper, written by Joyce Bupp. The article pertained to the "Steam-O-Rama" show held near Windsor, Pa. The lady stated that the "Sheppard" diesel tractor was the only one ever manufactured in York county. To start with, only about half of the tractor was actually built by Sheppard, mainly the engine, frame and maybe the steering mechanism. Other components were bought from companies located outside of York county. In the past the following companies built their entire tractor in York county: C.H.A. Dissinger & Bros. Co., Wrightsville, Pa.; A.B. Farquhar Co., York, Pa.; Flinchbaugh Mfg. Co., York, Pa.; Henry, Millard & Henry Co., York, Pa.

The readers of your fine paper are entitled to accurate information. By doing some research by the writer, this mistake would have been averted. I would hope that sometime soon, that you would publish a corrected article. I would appreciate a letter sometime from your office.

The writer also failed to mention original toy "Sheppard" Diesel tractors which were on display. I showed one of my own, which was purchased at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in 1949 or 50. It is in almost original condition and is quite valuable.

I look forward to reading your paper which represents a lot of work.

P.S. The source of my information concerning the tractor manufacturers is the "Encyclopedia of American Farm Tractors" by C.H. Wendel.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

WHAT, ME CELEBRATE?

WHAT, ME CELEBRATE?
November 2, 1997

Background Scripture:
Ezra 6
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 126:1-6

I truly regret that, with all that I have learned about following Jesus Christ over these many years, I have still not learned to celebrate as much or as deeply as is justified by God's providence and necessary for my own well-being. I'm learning, but it is not easy for me.

I understand the reasons for my difficulty in learning to celebrate. In my childhood and youth, the concept of "celebration" was rarely, if ever, mentioned in connection with worship. Worship tended to be somber and serious. Even if we sang celebratory hymns, we often managed to sing them with as little joy as possible. Somehow or other I got the idea that sobriety was worshipful; joy was not — no matter what the Bible said.

I was also raised in a culture where people practiced a tight control over their emotions, particularly the most positive ones. I hope I am not unfairly depicting the Pennsylvania "Dutch" (Germans) as essentially somber people. It was as if they permitted themselves too much joy, life would come and snatch it away. A hearty laugh seemed an invitation to disaster.

EXCESS/OVERCONTROL

Later, when I saw some people give themselves over to abandon during their services, I was utterly frightened and revolted. I remember hearing people speak of these people as "getting happy" and the suggestion was that we couldn't have that. Their emotional excesses seemed to justify my emotional overcontrol.

All of this talk about my struggle with celebration is for the purpose of encouraging you to take a good look at your own life. Is joyous celebration a part of your spirituality? If so, good for you! And, if not, or if not and much as you think it ought to be, then why not?

And that brings me to another reason why some of us do not celebrate very much in our Christian discipleship. Lack of celebration, I have come to believe, is the result of a wrong focus of our spiritual consciousness. When we focus on ourselves exclusively, we cannot help but become somber in the light of our failures, sins, disappointments and obstacles. But, when we spend a sufficient amount of our attention, not on our problems but God's graces — what God is doing in and around us — we cannot help but celebrate. I would celebrate more often and more deeply if I concentrated less on my own needs and wants and more on the love and mercy of God. How about you?

TIME TO CELEBRATE

The exiled people of Judah had a terrible experience. Carried far away from their homeland, their monarchy destroyed and their temple in ruins, the people were aliens in a strange land. One could understand if the predominant key of their religion had become a somber one. But, now the temple was rebuilt; everything had come together to fulfill the prophecies that had seemed so fanciful. It was a time for a celebration and the celebration needed to be no less deep and wide as the sorrow had been.

"And the people of Israel, the priests and the Levites, and the rest of the returned exiles, celebrated the dedication of the house of God with joy" (6:16). The time of sad songs and desperate prayers was over. Even their observance of the Passover was a celebration. "And they kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy; for the Lord had made them joyful . . ." (6:22).

Life is an experience of both the solemn and the joyful. Like everything else, our spiritual lives and particularly our worship must strike a healthy balance. For me, that means taking more time to celebrate.

And you?

EAST FLUID MILK AND CREAM REVIEW MADISON, WI. October 29, 1997

FLUID CREAM AND CONDENSED SKIM PRICES IN TANKLOT QUANTITIES SPOT PRICES OF CLASS II CREAM, DOLLARS PER LB BUTTERFAT

PRICES OF CLASS II CONDENSED SKIM, DOLLARS PER LB WET SOLIDS

F O B producing plants: Northeast - 1 0050-1.0550

Milk production is mostly steady to seasonally lower throughout the Northeast and Mid Atlantic areas. Cooler weather patterns have boosted production in the Southeast and Florida. Output is slowly increasing in Florida, but the need for milk continues Handlers imported approximately 143 loads this week originating from Wisconsin, Louisiana, and the Mid Atlantic states. This volume is double the amount of last week's total shipments. Southeastern contacts report increased milk flow, but surplus milk volumes are tight.

Manufacturing plants continue to be used only as reload stations. As a result of the high butter prices, contacts report that premiums for milk have been quoted as high as $5.00.

The Middle Atlantic region continues its weekly shipments to Florida, but surplus milk is more available this week. Other Northeastern contacts report improved

EAST FLUID MILK AND CREAM REVIEW

demand for Class I and Class III products Fluid milk sales are seasonally strong The condensed skim market is holding steady and interest is increasing Demand is moderate and contacts believe that prices may drop in the next couple weeks All divisons of the dairy industry have been affected by the record high butter prices last Friday at the CME.

Multiples used to determine cream prices are significantly lower this week Some producers, in an effort to help customers, are adjusting multiples to offset some of the effect of the butter market. Prices are above $2.00 per pound butterfat which tends to limit spot sales.

Ice cream production is lighter because producers cannot afford to buy cream at the current prices Contacts report that they have switched to using substitutes when possible Many have rearranged manufacturing schedules and are focusing on sherbert, yogurt, and low-fat ice cream instead of bulk ice cream

Lower fat tests and high cream prices have influenced cream cheese producers to begin making fat free products. Butter production and sales have temporarily slowed as producers wait to see what the market will do in the future. Many hope the market will balance itself out and that prices will adjust lower.

chance for tax reform will die at least for the next decade.

Jere Swarr, a Rapho Township farmer from Manehim, was a guest presenter. He said the need for tax reform in the agriculture community is a more recent problem because the assessed value of the land is not necessarily the value the farmer can get as income from that land.

"The farmers are paying on the assessed value, which is very high," Swarr said. "But the income that can be generated cannot support those high values. The real value of the farm is the income a farmer can produce. Any tax reform will be helpful to Lancaster County, and the whole ag land preservation movement and the ag zones and urban growth boundaries. Everything ties together. I really believe we must support our ag zones and our ag preserve farms. This feature to change the constitution is very critical to start tax reform."

Swarr also noted that the retired farmer who has farmed all his life and wants to retain his farm, cannot rent the land for much more than the value of the taxes.

"The farm community will only pay so much to rent the land of the retired farmer," Swarr said. "And the amount of property tax that must be paid ends up being a very high percentage of the rent. The farmer wants to retain his land and yet with the present tax system he is penalized for that."

Other guests who spoke included Bob Schaal, an older homeowner who also works for the Office of Aging as a volunteer, and Mary Tribble, a Lancaster city resident and small business owner.

Broad Support For Homestead Exemption Referendum

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Support for approval of a proposed Homestead Exemption ballot question Tuesday has been widespread.

Every major agricultural organization has sent press releases and made statements declaring support of the referendum which would set up the go-ahead for state legislators to change the Pennsylvania Constitution to allow for different taxing of homes — the Constitution requires all real estate to be taxed at the the same level.

The referendum is to appear on the ballots Tuesday, Nov. 4, accross the state.

There are other Constitution-changing questions to be asked of voters on Tuesday — do they want to change the structure of the state pardons board? (making it harder to get pardoned); and, do voters want to make it easier to vote by absentee voting methods?

The Homestead Exemption question has been at the forefront of interest by agriculture and governmental officials, because it is being seen and promoted as the first step toward true local tax reform.

The basic ideology of local tax reform would be to allow each local taxing authority the ability to use a mix of taxes that would better reflect local ability to pay taxes.

As it is, there are few options, but increasingly diverse economic makeups across the state.

Further, as land preservation has become a greater issue, and taxation of properties of those with set incomes has increased, concern has grown statewide about the restrictions on taxing authorities.

It has become widely apparent that the taxing laws have become an obstacle in the attempt to provide a sense of fairness in taxation.

Those in agriculture should be familiar with the state's Clean and Green preferential taxation law, which also required a change in the state Constitution.

Clean and Green allows the property to be assessed for agricultural value, instead of straight market value, or highest price value.

However, Clean and Green hasn't provided adequate relief and hasn't protected farmers from having their homes and buildings assessed at ridiculous rates — farm homes get assessed as though they are not located on a farm, but somewhere else.

With a number of counties having undergone mandatory tax reassessments recently (because local political leadership refused to conduct reassessments because of their political unpopularity and in many cases allowed assessments to remain at 1960s values), many people have discovered that their farmhouse has been valued at tremendously high rates, increasing their property taxes significantly, even after they enrolled their farmland in the Clean and Green program.

What the homestead exemption would do, is allow a local government or school district to be able to offer an across-the-board reduction on assessed values of homes in order to reduce the tax bill for home ownership.

The way it would be figured out would be on the median values of properties. Therefore, a local taxing authority, for its purposes, could reduce the assessed value of homes by up to 50-percent of the median value of homes in its area.

For example, if the median value of homes in an area was $50,000, that would reflect the middle value, or the average of the most numerous homes.

The homestead exemption would then allow a local taxing authority to reduce the assessed values by up to $25,000 (half of the median value).

That's what would happen. The local taxing authority would find the median, deduct a set amount from the regular assessed value of a home, and then request payment of taxes based on that value.

So, if the exemption were for $25,000, and the home was worth $75,000, it would be taxed as through it were worth $50,000.

In the same area, if the home were assessed at $250,000, the new taxable value would be $225,000.

Therefore, the exemption would seem to mostly benefit those with less valuable properties.

The millage couldn't be raised above lawful limits now in place, and other properties couldn't be taxed more to make up for the loss in money coming from taxing homes.

Proponents claim approving the homestead exemption will set up local tax reform by changing the constitution, and setting up a legal foundation for further change.

All the details of the actual taxing changes would be worked out in Harrisburg by the Legislature.

Some of the ways being discussed of making up for lost tax revenue would be the implementation of a local income and/sales tax.

Those concerns are still a long way into the future.

It took two consecutive approvals in two separate sessions of the state Legislature in order to get the homestead exemption question to be placed on the ballot. If it fails, it would take another two successful sessions of the Legislature to again approach the state's voters with another question.

While there have been fewer than a handful of letters objecting, or dissenting opinions published in regional newspapers, the general position of all the agricultural organizations is that approval of a homestead exemption will benefit agriculture.

The state Senate approved a resolution calling for promotion and support of the measure, and individual state senators and representatives have been publicly supporting it.

Early this week, former Gov. Dick Thornburgh joined legislators in a rally to support the exemption. Former Gov. Robert Casey also has stated support for it, according to published reports.

Penn State University College of Agricultural Sciences Cooperative Extension published an objective analysis of the proposed homestead exemption amendment to the constitution. They should be available through the local extension office.

Jere Swarr, Rapho Township farmer from Manheim, spoke at a news conference held by the Lancaster County commissioners Thursday morning. The conference was called to show support for the Homestead Exemption referendum that will appear on the Pennsylvania ballots next Tuesday. Swarr spoke for the farm community.

Taxing Questions

On Tuesday, Nov. 4, Pennsylvania's voters are to be asked three questions about changing the state constitution, in addition to selecting a slate of government officials.

The questions, or referendums, that will appear deal with prison board pardons, providing for some exemption of assessed values of homes for local taxing, and make it easier to vote with an absentee ballot.

The questions are to appear as follows Read them, and consider them now, instead of in the voting booth.

Homestead Exemption
Joint Resolution No. 1997-1

Shall the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to permit the enactment of legislation authorizing local taxing authorities to exclude from taxation an amount based on the assessed value of homestead property, with the limitations that the exclusions shall not exceed one-half of the median assessed value of all homestead property within the taxing jurisdiction and that the taxing authority may not increase the millage rate of its tax on real property to pay for these?

Prison Pardon Board
Joint Resolution No. 1997-2

Shall the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to require a unanimous recommendation of the Board of Pardons before the Governor can pardon or commute the sentence of an individual sentenced in a criminal case to death or life imprisonment, to require only a majority vote of the Senate to approve the Governor's appointments to the board, and to substitute a crime victim for an attorney and a corrections expert for a penologist as board members?

Absentee Voting
Joint Resolution No. 1997-3

Shall the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to require the enactment of legislation permitting absentee voting by qualified electors who at the time of an election may be absent from the municipality where they reside because their duties, occupation or business require them to be elsewhere, which would change the current law permitting asbentee voting by such qualified electors only when they are absent from the entire county where they reside?

N.Y., N.J. September Milk $12.59

ALBANY, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied regulated milk dealers (handlers) under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during September 1997 will be paid by handlers on the basis of a uniform price of $12.59 per hundredweight (27.1 cents per quart); the price for the corresponding month last year was $15.81 per hundredweight.

Market Administrator Ronald C. Pearce also stated that the price was $12.22 in August 1997.

The uniform price is a market-wide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

A total of 10,478 dairy farmers supplied handlers regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders with 966,777,079 pounds of milk during September 1997. This was an increase of 6.7 percent (about 60 million pounds) from last year.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $122,742,857.22. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not premiums, deductions authorized by the farmer, or assessments.

Regulated handlers used 415,824,784 pounds of milk for Class 1, 43 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For September 1997, handlers paid $13.28 per hundredweight (28.6 cents per quart) for Class 1 milk compared with $16.91 a year ago.

Handlers used 152,206,891 pounds of milk for Class II products, 15.8 percent of the total. Class II products include fluid cream, eggnog, ricotta and cottage cheeses, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $11.16 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture Class III products including butter, cheese (other than ricotta and cottage cheeses), and whole milk powder totaled 376,292,689 pounds (38.9 percent of the total). Handlers paid $12.85 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk (Class III-A) totaled 22,452,715 pounds (2.3 percent of the total). Handlers paid $11.93 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For September 1997, there was a price differential of 10.6 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received from farms in the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Leesport Farmers Market Honored

Prior to the fall feeder cattle sale at Leesport Farmers Market on Friday, October 24, 1997, the Weist family, owners of the market, were honored for 50 years of service to the livestock industry. The award in the form of a plaque was presented by Ed Frost from the National Livestock Marketing Association headquarted in Kansas City, Mo.

The market opened on July 9, 1947. The livestock was sold by the head because there was no scale. There were 25 consignors of cattle to the first sale. Wilmer Phillips still consigns animals fifty years later.

Today the expanded facility has many community events, in addition to their regular "Farmers' Market" activities. The market has been home to the Pomona Grange annual consignment sale for 27 years. Community fairs, a circus, car shows, family picnics, wool pools, marathons, and many other activities are all part of the growing center. "Where Friends Meet" is the motto of Leesport Farmers Market, Inc. Friends have met here for the past 50, and the owners hope friends will continue to meet here for the next fifty years.

Darvin Boyd Receives National Post

WASHINGTON, DC — Darvin E. Boyd, senior vice president and director of the agri-finance department for CoreStates Bank, is the 1997-98 chairman of the American Bankers Association Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee. He is the first Pennsylvanian in 45 years to hold this post. In this position, he also serves as chairman of the ABA National Agricultural Bankers Conference, Nov. 9-12, in Milwaukee.

The ABA Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee focuses on meeting bankers' needs through an array of products and programs, including texts and manuals, a journal of agricultural lending and an annual conference.

One of Boyd's top priorities as chairman is to help bankers take charge of issues related to the profitability of banks that serve agriculture and rural America. "The agriculture industry is constantly changing due to technology," Boyd said. "The business philosophy of 'business as usual' doesn't work anymore. The new philosophy, 'taking charge of change' is one that agricultural lenders should seize."

Boyd is a native Pennsylvanian. He's lived in Lancaster County most of his life and currently resides in Akron. He holds a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Delaware Valley College, Doylestown, Pa., and a master's degree in public administration from Pennsylvania State University, University Park, Pa.

He joined CoreStates in 1976. He manages 19 staff and $450 million in loan commitments and $300 million in loan outstandings. CoreStates is the leading commercial bank lending to agriculture in Pennsylvania and ranks first in the northeast and eleventh in the nation. Prior to joining CoreStates, he held staff positions for the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and the General Assembly. He also served as a 4-H program director for the American-Korean Foundation in the Republic of Korea.

Boyd is chairperson of the Lancaster County Human Relations

Darvin Boyd

Commission, an appointed member by the Governor to the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Land Preservation Board, an honorary trustee of the Lancaster Farmland Trust Board of Trustees, and a member of the Brethren Village Board of Directors and the Elizabethtown College Church of the Brethren mutual expectations committee. He serves as moderator of the Ephrata Church of the Brethren.

The ABA Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee has been active in finding ways for rural banks to locate new sources of lendable funds for rural economic development and streamline the lending process for guaranteed loans for farmers and ranchers in partnership with the United States Department of Agriculture. The Committee consists of 12 ABA member bank representatives plus a liaison member form the ABA State Association Division.

The ABA brings together all categories of banking institutions to best represent the interests of this rapidly changing industry. Its membership — which includes community, regional and money center banks and holding companies, as well as savings associations, trust companies and savings banks — makes ABA the largest banking trade association in the country.

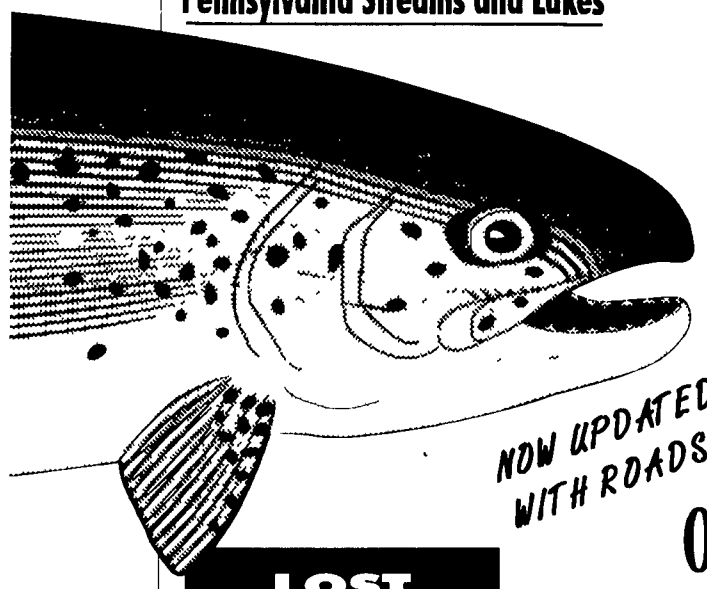
Pennsylvania Streams and Lakes

GREAT GIFT !



NOW UPDATED WITH ROADS!

Stream MAP of Pennsylvania

Why every fisherman needs this map

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters...many of them overlooked. From the Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This 3 foot by 5 foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes. That's almost three times the earth's circumference!

Professor Higbee's STREAMS

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thrity-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to the landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

The experts had always told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Raw Milk Pricing Representatives Speak in Maryland

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

Mt. Pleasant, Md. — Almost 100 dairy farmers and industry representatives attended an informational meeting here by a grassroots organization intent on raising the farm gate price of milk to producers. The American Raw Milk Producers Pricing Association, Inc. (ARMPPA) is a Wisconsin based organization seeking to build national membership. Sponsored in Maryland by volunteer coordinators Eddie and Beth Boyer, dairy farmers from Jefferson, the meeting was held at the Ruritan Hall in Mount Pleasant.

According to John Kinsman, vice president of ARMPPA and himself a Wisconsin dairy farmer, the orgnaization acts as a pricing agency, bargaining on behalf of its members to contract raw milk before it leaves the farm at a price equivalent to the cost of production plus a profit. It essentially functions as a broker through which family farms can pool their milk to obtain optimum milk prices, making federal orders "irrelevant." The idea generated emotional debate among those at the meeting.

In order to effectively bargain for the higher prices ARMPPA must enroll members throughout the nation whose combined raw milk production amounts to 20% of domestic production, Kinsman explained. Members enroll by paying a $20.00 membership fee and signing a contract now that goes into effect on the anniversary date of a farmer's current contract with his coop.

Once the critical mass of 20% of the milk produced has been enrolled in the association, ARMPPA will determine a price that is reasonable for the milk based on cost of production figures. It will then approach the coops and offer them the option of either paying that price, or losing the ARMPPA members' milk. If the milk buyer refuses to pay the set price, ARMPPA will contract the milk to a buyer who agrees to pay the price. ARMPPA members stand to gain bargaining power as more farmers join the organization and their milk becomes part of the pool.

Though not yet at the 20% goal they have set for themselves, ARMPPA members in Wisconsin are already seeing the benefits of the pricing agency, according to Joel Greeno, a dairy farmer from Kendall, Wisconsin, who spoke at the meeting. "So far agencies have been more than willing to pay the price and move the milk for ARMPPA members," he said. Greeno estimated 1,200,000 pounds of milk per day is being moved by the marketing agency. Mr. Kinsman stressed it was in the milk plants' best interest to work with ARMPPA instead of competing with it. "It's to their benefit because if we go out of business, they go out of business," he explained.

Delegate Paul Stull, commenting after the program, appealed to the dairy farmers to unite behind a bill that he could submit to committee in Annapolis. "Whatever the bill would be," he urged, "I encourage the dairy farmers to come to closure on whatever would be submitted. Get together on something, and please let your delegates know, because they need to know how you feel," he said.

Pa. Dairy Futures Conference Set For Dec. 10-11

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A Pennsylvania Dairy Futures Conference has been scheduled for Dec.10-11 in State College.

The deadline for registration is Nov. 11.

The "dairy futures" name does not refer to trading on market contracts; it refers to the future of the dairy industry.

The event is sponsored in part by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders — a group of dairy industry people more formally organized recently from efforts begun several years ago in an effort to bring some cooperation among all in the industry in Pennsylvania.

Also sponsoring the conference is the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry.

The reason the organization was formed was because the industry was faced with the 1995 Farm Bill (which eventually was passed in 1996) and dramatic changes that were preceived to be inevitable to occur in the dairy industry.

While representatives and the then-secretary of agriculture held public hearings in an attempt to gain some policy consensus within the dairy industry, it became apparent that the industry was divided among its separate interests — production, processing, marketing and service.

Under the leadership of former state Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff, along with leaders from the various industry and government sectors, the group met informally at first to attempt to discover common interests and goals.

The rationale behind bringing together the various industry people was to discover what could be done to strengthen the position of the Pennsylvania dairy industry to handle the oncoming changes, and to find some common ground.

While envisioning was part of that first and subsequent process, characterized more by fact- and opinion-sharing discussions, the group has become more solidified and formal.

Last year, Alan Bair, formerly a community relations director for the former Atlantic Breeders Cooperative (mergered with other cooperatives), was hired by Penn State University as director of dairy industry relations. In effect, his job was to facilitate the organization and development of the stakeholders identified through those earlier meetings.

During an August 27 meeting, the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders formally elected a board of directors and approved a set of bylaws.

It has adopted the mission statement, "Facilitating the viability and expansion of the dairy industry in Pennsylvania."

The annual meeting of the organization is to be held 4 p.m., Dec. 10, at the Days Inn Penn State, 240 South Pugh St., State College.

According to an October newsletter from the Bair, elected as Pa. Dairy Stakeholder board president was Philip Kimmel, president of Keystone Farm Credit.

Elected vice president was Lewis Gardner, vice president of Milk Marketing Inc. as well as a dairy producer. Named secretary/treasurer was Betty Reibson, a Sullivan County commissioner and a dairy producer.

According to the newsletter, "The current 10-member core leadership group will be expanded to a 13-member board of directors. Both the by-laws and the directors of the stakeholders will be offered for confirmation by the entire membership at the Dairy Futures Conference."

Scheduled to speak are state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. (no topic listed); Dr. John Lord, a researcher and professor at St. Joseph's University, who is to talk about food industry trends; and Monte Hemenover, the director of industry affairs for Protiva, a division of Monsanto.

Registration for the conference is to serve as registration for the annual meeting, though those wishing to attend only the meeting should contact Bair in Middletown at (717) 928-6328, before the meeting.

Registration Deadline:
November 11, 1997

The cost for attending the conference is $85 per person, with checks payable to: PA Dairy Stakeholders. A registration form and check should be mailed to N. Alan Bair, Penn State Harrisburg, 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057.

Those requiring overnight accomodations can call the State College Days Inn where a block of rooms is being reserved until Nov. 11. Hotel reservations can be made by calling (800) 325-2525.

Awards Presented At PA Council Of Cooperatives Annual Meeting

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives held it's annual meeting and awards banquet on October 23 at the Penn Stater Hotel and Conference Center in State College. Along with committee meetings and an annual board meeting, representatives of member cooperatives from around Pennsylvania heard presentations from John M. Urbanchuk, executive vice president of AUS Consultants Inc., and Christopher Mele, state relations manager of Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association.

A highlight of the day was the presentation of three awards to outstanding individuals who have made significant contributions to cooperatives and their members in Pennsylvania.

Walter and Lisa Royek of Corry, Erie County, received the 1997 Horizon Award from James Barnett, manager of member relations for Land O'Lakes and a PA Council of Coooperatives Director. The Royeks, Barnett said, typify this award, created in 1996, which is presented to emerging young cooperative leaders. Walter and Lisa first became involved with the PCC in 1990 while attending the Council's Young Cooperative Leaders Conference. They returned to the Conference in 1990 as Western region leaders and again in 1992 as Chari Couple for the event.

Lisa, a school teacher, serves as an instructor of ag and cooperative issues in Penn State's "Ag in the Classroom" program, and Walter and Lisa have opened their Dairy of Distinction Farm to hundreds of school children in the past few years allowing a first-hand glimpse of milk production. The Royeks provided the closing motivational address at the YCL Conference in July of 1996, and honored the Council with a second-place finish in the 1996-97 National Young Farmer Ambassador contest sponsored by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Sam Minor receives the 1997 Cooperative Educator Award from Jay Rush.

Carol Duncan receives the Hal F. Doran award from Milton Hallberg.

Jay Rush, president of York Farm Credit, of York presented the 1997 Cooperative Educator Award to Sam Minor of Washington. This award is presented annually to an individual who has made a signficant contribution to the PCC in promoting and supporting cooperative educational activities. Sam and his wife, Beverly, own and operate "The Spring House," a dairy and vegetable farm and a retail farm market and restaurant. Sam is active in many agricultural organizations and is a past president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, a director of Penn West Farm Credit Association, A Pennsylvania delegate and vice chairman of the National Council on Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching, a member of the USDA National Research, Education, Extension and Economics Advisory Board, and a director of the Pennsylvania serving as the industry's ambassador.

Newly appointed president of the association John Matillio said that the Association is pleased with the positive image Kendra presents. As an FFA student, Kendra excells in public speaking. In fact, she has won at local, regional, and state levels, which makes her eligible to compete at the national level during the upcoming National FFA Convention to be held in Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 12-16.

Sec. of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. presented a $1,500 check from the Pa. Dept. of Ag under the matching grant program. The money is for an exhibit booth to be used at fairs and other promotional events.

"This wouldn't happen without the your local lawmakers' support," Hayes said of the matching grant.

In addition to Mattilio as president, board officers include Tom Fox, vice president; Andy Bradford, secretary, and Andy Long, treasurer.

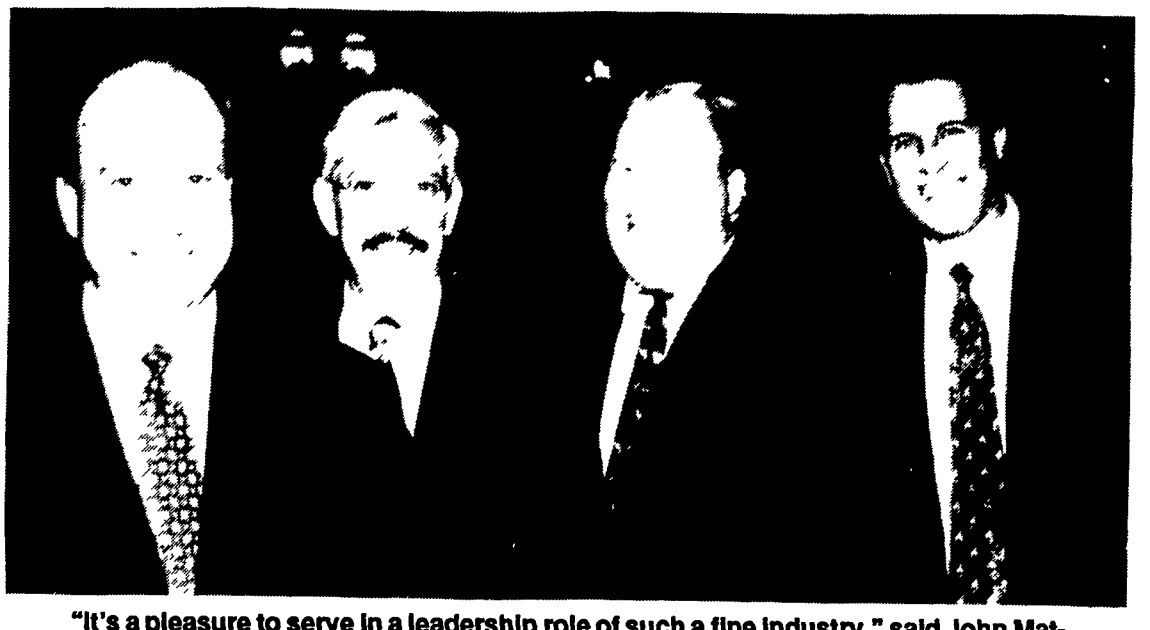
Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes, left, presents a matching funds check of $1,500 for poultry promotion to Don Brubaker, outgoing president.

Kendra Weaver is congratulated on being selected as Lancaster County Poultry Ambassador, from left, by George Georges, board member; Sec. of Agriculture Samuel Hayes, and Dr. John Schwartz, extension director and advisor for the Association.



"It's a pleasure to serve in a leadership role of such a fine industry," said John Mattilio, left, president of the Lancaster County Poultry Association. He pledged that the board would work to make the good better. With him are Tom Fox, vice president; Andy Bradford, secretary; and Andy Long, treasurer.

Poultry Accomplishments

Industry representative nominated to serve on the board are Ron Duvall and Rich Roenigk.

The treasurer's report showed a beginning balance of $34,768 with additional income of $25,501 during the past year. The association spent $54,071 on promotional events such as radio ads, school embryology projects, placemats distributed to county restaurants, banquet for home economics teachers, and education at Ag Progress days. A golf tournament was held for a fund raiser and participation in two Gourmet Fests at Donecker's Market served as promotional events.

Also, three students were given scholarships in honor of J. Irwin, extension director emeritus, and three students were given savings bonds through the home economics program. A donation of $1,000 was given to the Hands on House for updating facilities relating to agriculture. The main budget expenditures were the purchase of a new food booth and the professional production of a video to be used in schools and other promotional settings.

Clair and Edie High present a $3,616 check for the Association to Don Brubaker, right. The Highs oversee the poultry food booth at the Ephrata Fair. The food booth is a fund raiser for the Association.

For the first time last year, the Association served a meal in Pennsylvania Governor Thomas Ridge's honor at the Water Street Rescue Mission. Outgoing president Don Brubaker said that the dinner was given in lieu of presenting a basket of poultry products to the governor during the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

"We spent lots of money but for good causes," Brubaker said.

A balance of $6,198 was reported in the treasury.

Later, Clair and Edith High presented a check for $3,616, profit from the food sales of $6,900 at the Ephrata Fair.

High said of the new food booth, "It's easy up, easy down, and easy to move. Use it. It's beautiful, easy to clean, and I expect it to look as good in five years as it does now."

Mattilio said that the account balance does not include the individual memberships renewed during the banquet, and the monies garned at the banquet for ticket sales, sponsor money, and the checks from Ephrata Fair and from PDA.

After the business session, Mansion Heirs of Paradise provided southern gospel music for entertainment.

John Mattillo, left, hands Don Brubaker and his wife Louanne a certificate of appreciation for fulfilling presidential duties for the Association.

125th anniversary of the Pa. State Grange and its efforts over the years.

The announcement of the Granger of the Year Award was held until the end of the banquet. The award is the highest honor to be bestowed upon a Grange member.

Fishovitz, a 30-year Grange member, belongs to the Big Knob Grange No.2008, the Beaver Pomona Grange No. 66. She has served as master of Big Knob and the Beaver Pomona granges; chaplain of the Pomona Grange; a junior leader of Big Knob for 11 years; master for first, second, third and fourth degree teams; and as president of the youth group.

She has also been involved in church activities, and is the Region E representative on the Junior Camp Committee.

"The Grange has a strong family basis, as does the church," she said, "and it is important to me to spend time not only with my own children, but other young people as well. I love to be with young people and it is important to help them build a strong foundation as they grow up.

"One of the things I love about the Grange, that may not be present in other organizations, is that we build self-esteem as we teach children to appreciate themselves and each other."

Dr. John F. McHugh, a Grange member, a Lehigh County commissioner, a retired principal of the Allentown School District, public speaker and toastmaster, was the main speaker of the banquet.

Involved in many public and political organizations for years, he recently was the recipient of the Community Service Award from the Liberty Bell Chapter National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, is an alumnus of Kutztown State College and Lehigh University, is an U.S. Army veteran, and is to have the library of the to-be-completed Korean Vietnam Memorial Educational Center named after him.

But he didn't talk about all of that. He talked about the specialness of being a Grange member, of being involved in prerseving individual freedoms, and of enjoying life through participation.

He also talked about the youth of today and how they still need to be taught survival skills, such as discipline, and the maintenance and caring for themselves and others.

He mentioned the fact that many members of the Grange are greying, and said that it means much — not so much that the members are getting older and need to recruit youth, but that they have much yet to share with youth.

McHugh said that as we approach the end of the century, and thus the millenium, "We have the opportunity to witness life at the begining of a new millenium. We have an opportunit to take a look at what life has been like in the 20th Century — our life — and look at the future and be advisors for the future.

"You and I talk about inheritance. We are the great inheritors of the land of God. God asks us to be guardians of that land."

He said that in the United States, and within the many organizations that exist, there are many duties to perform. But none is so important as preparing for the future.

He said that as the members of Grange look back, they should discover that, "We are special people. We have been upholding the principles of America. We are for America."

McHugh said that his generation has experienced much and were able to survive a Depression and world wars and other wars because of benefitting from being raised within a solid family order, where each family created and lived by its own survival strategy, and from learning self-reliance, community, and social skills.

"You and I have been bastions of the best of America," he said, adding that someone must take over and it is up to those currently on watch to ensure that those set to take over understand what it is they can do to .

Other that the Granger of the Year Award, community service awards were presented to the top Pomona (county) level Grange, and to the top subordinate (local) Grange.

Berks Pomona was named as the winner of its category, while the Virginville Grange was the winning subordinate.

The community service award is based on the projects and number of hours performed in community service.

In other recognition, the William Steel presented the 1997 Master's Award to John Corkum, master of the Keystone Grange No.2 in Montgomery County. He was cited for outstanding membership growth, community service, and legislative work. Steel presented a framed Norman Rockwell print.

In a special presentation in light of the historic occasion, Steel announced that four of the original 22 subordinate Pennsylvania Granges that formed the Pa. State Grange are still in existance, and that he researched and made reproductions of their original charter applications.

The framed reproductions were presented to representatives of those subordinate Granges: Eagle Grange in Lycoming County; Keystone Grange in Montgomery; Kennet Square Grange in Chester; and Sanatoga in Montgomery.

In other convention activities during the week, state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr.

From the left, William Steel, master of the Pa. State Grange, John Corkum, Betsy Huber and Robert Zimmerman hold framed copies of the original charter petitions of the remaining four original subordinates that formed the Pa. State Grange.

addressed the delegate body at the annual session on Monday.

Hayes said that PDA is drafting an action plan and looks forward to continuing its working relationship with the Grange.

"As we close the door on this century, we must open the door to the 21st century in a robust way, and we must have as much enthusiasm for the next century as we do in planning for the end of this one."

He also said the PDA is working toward increasing exports and said he planned to visit Asia, Argentina and Mexico to promote the state's agricultural commodities.

The 500 delegates approved new Grange policy during their session.

According to Grange Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh, "These issues are of greatest concern to our membership and the Pennsylvania State Grange will see that these policies are addressed as the state and federal level."

The policies included one that would require all municipalities and authorities to receive approval from the Agricultural Land Condemnation Board prior to using eminent domain proceedings when dealing with farm land.

Also approved was a policy about the state's Clean & Green program, which provides beneficial tax treatment on farmland, based on agricultural use rather than development use.

The Grange would have the law include the entire acreage of the farm in the program, instead of separating the farmland from the homestead and buildings, as is currently the case.

It also passed policy to include recreational animals under the provisions of the state's nutrient management act. As it is, the law only limits the amount of production agriculture animals per acre allowed on a farm before a mandatory nutrient management plan is required.

It had been acknowledged by industry and agricultural representatives when regulations were first being drafted that there were situations in which recreational animals, such as boarded pleasure horses, were being held and maintained on farms at densities that exceeded the threshold for needing a nutrient management plan.

It also approved related policy to request the state Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Department of Environmental Protection to coordinate and create a pilot project that would use animal waste as a fuel for energy production.

The Grange delegates also approved policy that calls for the Environmental Protection Agency to study the impact of tighter air quality standards it has proposed to see if those standards are justified, before forcing them on agriculture.

The Grange also approved policy that would direct local real estate tax assessment office to wait until a subdivision plan is finalized and the plan filed with the county recorder of deeds before reassessing the land for tax purposes.

In other business, only one leadership position required an election at this year's convention. John Master of Harrisville was selected to serve a 4-year-term on the Pa. State Grange Executive Committee. Master, a member of the Scrubgrass Grange in Venango County, serves as chairman of the legislative committee of the Venango Pomona Grange.

Cooperative Employees Attend Training

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Employees of cooperatives doing business in Pennsylvania recently attended one-day seminars sponsored by the Penn State Cooperative Business Education and Research Program (CBERP).

More than 60 employees of cooperatives attended workshops held at Harvest Drive Restaurant near Lancaster and the Towanda Country Club Conference facility.

Participants included employees of Adams Electric Cooperative; Agway; Genex, Inc.; Keystone Farm Credit ACA; Lancaster DHIA; Northeast Farm Credit ACA; Pennsylvania DHIA; Pro-Fac, Inc; Sire Power, Inc.; and York Farm Credit.

According to Dick Poorbaugh, CBERP program manager, the sessions were designed to provide employees with a better understanding of the cooperative way of doing business and with issues and impacts associated with the wave of cooperative mergers and alliances now going on across the United States.

"Change usually brings some uncertainty and stress, and it is important that employees be comfortable that strategic moves are positive with respect to membership value and the viability of the organization," Poorbaugh said. "Because the members are owners and users of the services of a cooperative business, employees are the first line of communication between members and the director-management team."

In addition to cooperative basics, participants shared information about their organizations and participated in breakout sessions on defining and communicating membership value and other issues. The final topic for the day, "Managing the Time of Your Life," provided a personal development opportunity to wrap up the program.

For more information, contact CBERP at (814) 863-0644 or send e-mail to rwp2@psu.edu.

Council of Cooperatives. Sam has served as an Agway director since 1987. He is a member and past president of the Washington County Cooperative Extension Service, and a member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and the Pennsylvania State Grange. The Penn State University College of Agricultural Sciences named him an Alumni Fellow in 1989.

Carol Duncan, of Robesonia, was awarded the 1997 Hal F. Doran Cooperative Business Education Award by Milton C. Hallberg, chair of the Penn State University/Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives joint committee. This award, which carries with it a Nittany Lion trophy and a check for $500, is given each year to an individual who best exemplifies the interest and dedication to cooperative education shown by Hal F. Doran, past director of Penn State's cooperative business education and research program. Hallberg commended Mrs. Duncan as a tireless supporter of community and cooperative causes in Southeast Pennsylvania, the state and the country, who has donated an abundance of energy and countless hours to furthering cooperatives through educational programs, effective communications and progressive leadership.

Carol Duncan joined Farm Credit in 1974, serving as marketing manager from 1979 until 1989. Following the merger that created Keystone Farm Credit, she served as director of member and public relations until her retirement in 1994. Over the years, Carol served in numerous leadership positions of cooperative organizations, such as the Chester County Cooperative Extension Service, the Pennsylvania 4-H Foundation, the Cooperative Communicators Association, the Eastern Member Relations Conference, and the Southeastern Region Board of PCC. She served as president of PCC in 1991 and 1992. Carol continues to serve as the permanent "manager" for PCC's successful annual Ag Horizons conference.

Carol has earned the respect and admiration of her peers as demonstrated by the many awards she has received from the cooperative community. These include the 1993 Distinguished Service Award from the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives, the 1993 Cooperative Communicator Award from the National Council of Farm Cooperatives, and the Baltimore Farm Credit District's president's award.

4-H 'More Than Just Showing Animals,' Says Member At Lancaster County Swine Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — As 4-H'ers, "we need to think about the friends we've made rather than the trophies we won," said Gerald Boyd, this year's 4-H Superior Achievement Award winner.

Gerald spoke to his family and friends Thursday evening at the Lancaster County 4-H Swine Banquet at the Farm and Home Center.

Gerald, 18, son of Kerry and Deb Boyd, Ephrata, spoke about his experiences as a 4-H'er the past 11 years. He also told almost 200 gathered at the annual swine club awards banquet all about what 4-H has taught him.

Gerald said that "4-H is more than just showing animals," and that members learn the essential skills to getting along in life.

"Winning is nice and often fun," he said. "But we must face the reality that we fail more often than succeed. We need to learn that we're not going to win all the time in life."

Gerald said it's important that we honor the 4-H leaders we have, including the parents and friends that allow members to learn life skills, meet others, and make friends with people in all walks of life.

His sister Sarah, 16, president of the swine club, echoed those words in a poem she read aloud about how important it is to concentrate on the more important things 4-H teaches: confidence, self-respect and respect for others, how to run successful meetings, and other skills. Sarah has been a member of the club for eight years.

Gerald noted that he would "like to encourage older members to help out younger members of the club," he said, and to think of the "the good feeling you'll get from helping younger members."

The award banquet honored several 4-H members and leaders for their work in leading the club, the largest it has ever been at 101 (with 26 new members), to another successful year.

Outstanding 4-H Member went to Sarah Boyd for her work as president of the club. Rookie of the Year went to Andy Hughes, 9, son of Chet and Marie Hughes, Lampeter. A Special Appreciation Award was given to Tom Leidy of Leidy's, Inc. for the company's outstanding support to 4-H.

Chet Hughes, county livestock agent and master of ceremonies for the awards banquet, presented special 4-H Spirit awards to two unique 4-H members.

Hughes said, "We all have a special place in our hearts for young people like Patrick Good and Jakie Brubaker, who have faced some difficult life challenges that many of us take for granted."

Hughes, who regrets not being able to attend the New Holland Farmers' Fair where Patrick and Jakie were honored for their grand and reserve champion hogs, respectively, said, "Some of you may not know that our good friend Jakie Brubaker has already been challenged by heart surgery a couple times in his young life. I am sure that Jakie's heart got a big boost when his 4-H pig was named reserve champion at New Holland.

"I certainly feel that Patrick and Jacob have gained a lot from the 4-H swine program but have also given back to us so much in 4-H Spirit," Hughes said.

Project book awards for completeness, creativity, neatness, photos, blue form, story, and project experiences went to first place, Sarah Boyd; second, Gerald Boyd; and third, Loren Hershey. Honorable mentions went to Lisa Pfautz, Amy Hoffines, Tiffany Dean, Jennifer Hughes, Travis Donough, Jill Hoffines, and Allison Hughes.

Harry Bachman, president of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association and chair of the swine show at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE), presented special awards to two 4-H members.

Gerald Boyd was honored for champion hog in the junior show and reserve grand champion of the whole show. "It says a lot when you can bring your bred and owned up to Keystone and win like that," said Bachman. Gerald won champion on-foot with a score of 55, with a 7.2-inch loineye and .8 backfat.

In the junior show, Gerald faced off against 100 head of swine and 50-60 exhibitors. Overall, there were close to 1,000 head of hogs at KILE this year, with "great participation from Lancaster County," noted Bachman.

In the carcass competition, there were 282 head entered. Cory, son of Rick and Sue Pfautz, Lititz, won grand champion overall with a hog that scored a 12-inch loineye and .5 backfat. The hog had "probably the largest loineye that have ever measured at Keystone," said Bachman. Cory also had the highest score ever recorded at the carcass show at KILE — 68.67.

In fact, the judges were so surprised by the loineye measurement, Bachman noted, that they repeated the measurement several times.

Chet Hughes, livestock agent and club coordinator, thanked the banquet committee for the new format this year — covered dish, brought in by 4-H family members. This is the 10th year for the countywide club, and there have been 12 shows and sales at the Manheim Farm Show. This year marked the 9th successful carcass show. The club is sending 28 members to the 1998 state Farm show.

Someday, Hughes said, "we'd like to send 100 members from Lancaster County to Farm Show. That's our goal. We're going to reach that someday."

At the banquet, recognition was given to members, leaders, and fair and roundup sale contributors for their support.

Outstanding 4-H Member went to Sarah Boyd, right, for her work as president of the club. Rookie of the Year went to Andy Hughes, 9, left, son of Chet and Marie Hughes, Lampeter. A Special Appreciation Award was given to Tom Leidy of Leidy's, Inc., standing, for the company's outstanding support to 4-H.

Project book awards for completeness, creativity, neatness, photos, blue form, story, and project experiences went to, from left, first place, Sarah Boyd; second, Gerald Boyd; and third, Loren Hershey.

Gerald Boyd, right, was honored for champion hog in the junior show and reserve grand champion of the whole on-foot show. Cory Pfautz, son of Rick and Sue Pfautz, Lititz, won grand champion on-rail overall with a hog that scored a 12-inch loineye and .5 backfat.

Special 4-H Spirit awards went to Jacob Brubaker, pictured here, and Patrick Good, for their outstanding year in 4-H.

Grange Is Family

Four-Generation Family Active In Grange

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Hundreds of Grangers gathered this week for a "family" reunion.

"Grange is family," said Brian Ebersole, a college student, who was attending the five-day convention of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Held Oct. 25-29 in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, Reading, the 125th anniversity session marked Brian's grandfather, Paul Britcher Sr., 60th year as a member.

"I wanted my five children to always enjoy the Grange so I gave them lifetime memberships," Britcher said.

His gift is not considered coercion but a valued opportunity for the four generations of his family who attended this year's convention.

"I wouldn't know my best friends if it weren't for the Grange," said Brian's sister Stacy.

Brian and Stacy grew up knowing that vacation always ment attending a Grange convention.

They are enthusiastic and vocal about Grange membership. The two previously won appointment as national public speakers and travelled across the U.S. to promote the Grange.

Brian, a student at Ursinus College, plans to become a politician. Despite the prospect of a hectic lifestyle, Brian is adamant: "I never want to give up Grange."

His 24-year-old sister Stacy was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and returned to her hometown to work in a bank and to serve as master of the Perry County Pomona Grange—a position that delights her grandfather.

His daughter Martha Ebersole credits him with instilling creativity in carrying out many Grange responsibilities.

Martha is the state youth director for four years. About 80 youth attended youth activities during the weekend session.

Her kids credit her for transferring her leadership ability to them, but they also offer some advice to their mother when she gets frustrated "mothering" so many youth. They tell her: "Don't try to be a mother to every one, just be there."

Martha's husband Ray is also an active Granger. "He's my best man," Martha said of her husband's support of her year-round duties as state youth director.

Martha selected the sunflower as the emblem for the Grange youth. She said, "I chose the sunflower because the Grange is just like it in that it is blooming and growing across Pennsylvania.

The perky flowers were evident on "sunflower designed" vests, shirts, and corsages—many made by the elder Britcher.

"Dad can make everything," his daughter Isabelle Myers said of Britcher.

Now 74 years old, Britcher uses the skills he obtained by working in a garment factory. He sews everything from a country rabbit used as a Grange fundraiser to the sunflower vests worn by his daughters to promote the Grange.

Britcher is typical of Grangers who believe in doing everything they can to help others.

The Grange is lauded for their work with the deaf. Britcher, his children, and grandchildren have learned to sign songs as part of their Grange involvement.

Bricker said of his 60-year involvement with the Grange; "It's changed in some procedures, but the Grange is still made up of close knit and kind people. I can go to a Grange meeting in any state and feel welcome wherever I go."

The state convention is only one week of the three that the Bricker offspring spend with their "Grange family." In the spring, they take off a week for Grange camp and in two weeks they will attend the national Grange convention in Massachuset.

Paul Britcher Sr. is proud that four generations of his family travel as a family to participate in Grange functions at local, county, state, and national levels. He is surrounded by his daughter Martha Ebersole, left, and her children Brian and Stacy. Another of Britcher's daughters, Isabelle Myers is at right with grandson Derek. The 74-year-old Britcher stitched the vests his daughters are wearing and the black velvet dress worn by his granddaughter.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Women's Director Finds Grange Patriotic, Religious, Family-Oriented, Just Plain Friendly

LOU ANN GOOD

READING (Berks Co.) — Behind every successful organization are dedicated hard workers.

Rebecca Michalka is one of those for the Pennsylvania State Grange.

For 13 years, she's the person in charge of the women's activities. This means she plans and organizes the hundreds of needlework and craft projects that are entered for competition and for distribution at the annual state Grange convention. She also plans annual baking contests. And, under Becky's organization, the Grange has printed three cookbooks. The most recent one was just released in celebration of the 125th anniversary celebration of the Grange.

"Becky," as she is most often called, lives within one mile of the Washington County home in which she was born.

Church, Grange, and family activities fill her life. As a young teen-ager she became pianist and organist at the church where she now is choir director and organist.

She and her husband John married 47 years ago and joined the Grange about 30 years ago.

Becky said that she joined because she knew school friends who were involved in the Grange. Becky soon became women's activity director for Washington County. About 13 years ago, the state master attended a meeting where Becky reported on the women's activities. He was quoted as saying, "I got to get that woman working at the state level."

That was 13 years ago, proof that Becky is doing diligent work in the appointment that is renewed every two years.

Nothing thrills Becky more than to see the hundreds of mittens, hats, adult bibs, lap robes, and bed socks members make to donate to charity.

Articles submitted for competition need to win at the subordinate (local) and pomona (county) levels before they can be entered in state competition.

Every year a baking contest is held for different baked goods. This year, cupcake competition was held. After the top three were selected, the remainder were distributed to the a homeless shelter in the area.

Several years ago, Becky suggested Grange members make and donate quilts through the ABC organization. The quilts are made for babies born addicted to drugs.

"Many of these babies die before their second birthday and are buried wrapped in one of these quilts," Becky said of the 1,000 baby quilts.

About 9,000 handmade toys were judged and donated to Ronald McDonald Houses, ambulance services, children hospitals, and other needy charities.

In addition, members donate personal care items, which are distributed in bags, and donated to a shelter for abused women.

Needlework competition is also held for items that are not donated. The recycling class featured jeans that had been recycled into items such as patchwork vests, quilts, purses, slippers, Christmas decorations, and so forth.

Another project is donating used postage stamps. Members donate postage stamps clipped from envelopes. At the convention this year, bags and boxes of all sizes were stuffed with stamps that members had donated. These are shipped to the Brethren Home in New Oxford where clients sort the stamps and sell to stamp collectors.

"I've been told the Brethren Home has been able to buy $16,000 worth of equipment since the postage stamp project was started," Becky said. She was uncertain how many years this took.

Becky learned to sew, knit, and do needlework when she "was a kid."

(Turn to Page B4)

Grangers demonstrate love with their hands according to Becky Michalka, women's activity director for the state Grange. Grangers brought about 9,000 toys to be judged and distributed to needy charities.

After cupcakes are judged, Eleanor Hill, Nevin Hill, and Agnes Wilson pack up the cupcakes, which are distributed at a homeless shelter.

Grangers bring used postage stamps to give to the Brethren Home, who package stamps for stamp collectors. Betty Grove said that the project has brought in $16,000 for the Brethren Home since the project was begun.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

November 1st and most plants are really slowing down. But as I take one of my last walks around the house, I'm surprised at what I see.

Some orange zinnias at the back porch are still blooming and the picnic table has been set on end to mow the yard one last time. As I turn the corner of the house, I notice the large watermelon that should be picked. This plant somehow came up on its own and gave us four melons. Maybe we'll plant one on the south side of the house next year.

When I glance toward the garden, I see that the last sweet corn has frosted leaves and will only have small ears. Some plants such as cabbage, broccoli, and Chinese cabbage are looking fine. Beside the garden are the two tiny pawpaw thees that Allen planted for me. It will be years before they bear but we do have big trees that yield now. Even the yellow raspberries have a few for me to eat.

Next I check on the saffron bulbs that my sister gave me and I see that some are blooming now. They are special just because there are so few of them. My husband's roses are especially nice just now as no insects are chewing on them. So, I pick some buds from red, pink, white and yellow bushes for a vase.

The lavender mums are still blooming along with the deep pink dianthus. As I turn the last corner of the house, I see my patch of tea and decide to pick two kinds for dinner. On a cold day, we enjoy a hot cup of our own tea. Soon I will just be in the house looking out at the things that kept me busy all summer long.

Women's Director

Her experience has helped her in overseeing hundreds of projects. Not only does she serve at the state level, but for the past two years, she has been on the women's committee for the national Grange.

"Members must submit exceptional projects to win at the national level," she said. The entries that won at the state level this week are qualified to be entered in national competition. Becky and seven committee members package the winning entries and ship them to the national convention site to be held in Massachuset. in two weeks.

"There is always a need for charity items," Becky said. "We have whole families that participate in these projects together. This makes them aware of the problems in their communities and that families, by working together, can do something about these problems to make their communities a better place to live."

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural, and community service organization that is dedicated to making Pennsylvania a better place to live. More than 30,000 are members in the largest and oldest farm organization in the state. The Grange is the legislative voice on agricultural and rural issues in Harrisburg.

"I like the Grange because it's patriotic, religious, family-oriented, and just plain friendly," Becky said.

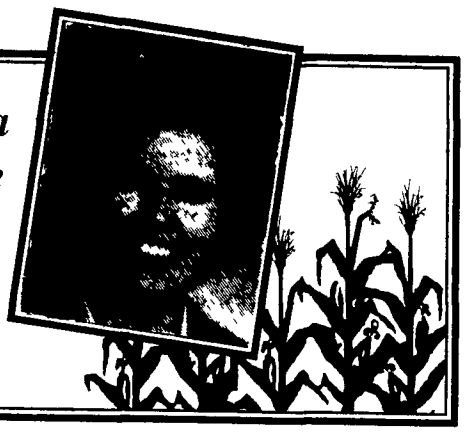
On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)



Joyce Bupp

Well, here we are, smack-dab between two of the season's significant holidays.

Halloween. And, Election Day.

Not likely that many of us were unaware of Halloween. After all, retailiers had pumpkin-stuff in the stores at least 10 weeks ago. Some places, maybe sooner.

And why not enjoy getting into the spooky spirit, anyway? What's more adorable than your favorite little people showing up at your doorstep, giggling under a creative costume that their mom may have spent untold hours creating? Plus, it's one time of the year when I can stop apologizing for the spider webs in the house corners and instead just pretend I'm in tune with seasonal decorating.

To say nothing of the great excuse it made to stock up extra chocolate candy in the cupboards.

Okay, now, hands up. How many of us who were ready to hand out trick-or-treat goodies are equally prepared to vote on Election Day? Uh, huh. I was afraid of that.

At least most of us should be aware that there's an election on the horizon, if for no other reason than the bombardment of election ads via both the broadcast and printed media. To nothing of the sprouting of candidate signs along the roads, like weeds popping up after a July rain. (Yes, Virginia, some years it does rain in July around here.)

Fact is, many of us are woefully unprepared to intelligently vote this coming Tuesday at our local polling place. (Many folks out in citizen land AREN'T EVEN REGISTERED TO VOTE, for crying out loud! Meaning they have forfeited the right to whine or bellyache about any public policy.

Anyway, Th Farmer and I are registered and we do plan to vote.

But...every election, I try to study the information presented in local papers and non-partisan, pre-election publications, describing candidates and issues. But...too often, I still find myself standing in the voting booth, trying to select from candidates, like for judge seats on a high state court, when I have no clue who they really are. Sure, I've read the short paragraph or two giving their philosophy about issues, but I have no idea what really makes them tick or who would be the best individual for the job. And I get frustrated with myself every election over that.

There's one issue we do know about this year, though. It's an issue called the "Homestead" tax measure and it's near and dear to the hearts of Pennsylvania's farmers.

For years, farmers and property holders have lamented the system which levies the bulk of local taxes on those who own land. Most property owners we know are willing to pay their fair share of taxes to provide local services. But much of farm and open land requires only nominal "service" from our local taxing entities. One familiy on, say 100 acres, requires far less per-acre service, for schools, roads, trash, fire, water, sewage, etc., than cluster areas where there might be several dozen-or several hundred-people per acre. Clean and Green legislation eased the property tax burden a bit for those qualifying. But it's not nearly adequate to cushion the blow to some of our farm friends who recently saw their local assessment valuations triple, while at the same time watching their crops wither in the fields.

The Homestead exemption, Joint Resolution 1997-1 on the ballot, would amend our state Constitution to allow local tax districts to initiate property tax relief measures. All residents of an area, rather than just property owners, could thus more fairly share the responsibility of funding local public services.

Regardless of your election views, don't be tricked into thinking your vote doesn't matter. Instead, treat yourself and your country by participating in our right-our responsibility-as American citizens.

Vote on Tuesday.

The newly released 488-page "125th Anniversary Pennsylvania State Grange Commemorative Cookbook," holds a wonderful collection of recipes.

Although this is the fifth cookbook the Grange has printed, the recipes in the newly published cookbook have not appeared in the previous cookbooks.

Each copy of the new cookbook costs $13 plus $3 for shipping and handling. For a copy, send a check with your name and complete address to the Pennsylvania State Grange, 1604 N. Second St., Harrisburg, PA 1710

For more information, call the state office in Harrisburg at 1-800-552-3865.

Here are two recipes from the cookbook that will have your family and guests think you have slaved for hours in the kitchen.

BUBBLE BUNS

1 loaf frozen bread, let rise as directed on package
½ stick butter
½ cup brown sugar
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
¼ cup nuts or coconut

Break off bite-size pieces of dough, roll in melted butter, sugar, and cinnamon. Place one layer in pan; add nuts or coconut, then another layer of dough. Pour remaining butter and sugar on top. Let rise two hours. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes.

PULL APART SWEET ROLLS

1 loaf frozen white bread dough
4 ounce package butterscotch pudding mix
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup chopped pecans or walnuts
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 tablespoons butter, melted

Quarter thawed dough lengthwise. Cut each quarter into 8 cubes (total 32). Combine dry pudding mix; brown sugar, nuts and cinnamon. Dip each cube in melted butter, then roll in pudding mixture. Place in greased 6 cup ring mold in three layers. Drizzle with any remaining butter and sprinkle with any remaining pudding mix. Cover. Let rise until double (1 to 1¼ hours). Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes. For variation, omit nuts and use bundt pan.

Stress:
Been There - Doing It Now!!!

Picture this, I'm at the mall, I have my 10-year-old and my 12-year-old with me. They walk behind me, moan at the very mention of going into a dress shop, argue over who is getting what at the toy store, complain that I won't let them do anything. Meanwhile, my car has to be towed (lights were left on) my only credit card expired, and I just discovered tissue paper hanging from my left heel. Let me tell you about stress!

What parent hasn't experienced stress? Whether you have an infant, toddler, school age, pre-adolescent or adolescent, one or more kids, single or married-you are going to have stress!

What is stress anyway? Why does one event make you feel like the whole world is coming apart? How can some people manage so much more than others? Why can't I have a perfect family?

Stress is the result of your perception of events which directly influences your body's reaction to those events. For example: kids getting into things isn't stressful. It's natural for kids of all ages to explore and test their limits. How you react triggers your stress. If you have a hundred other things on your mind, it doesn't take much testing to send you to the top of your stress level.

When it comes to managing stress you need to look at the event and determine what you can control. You may only be in control of your reaction. In the story above, there isn't one event that I could have changed. How I reacted to one or more of those events is what I can change!

Here are some tips for handling stress in your everyday routine:

Get enough sleep-even 10 minute cat naps are good.

Work off stress with physical activity-you don't need a gym, do physical activities with your kids or spouse. It's O.K. to play.

Talk out your troubles-find a listener, someone that doesn't have to fix your problems, just listens to them whilie you reflect on your own situation. Be sure to reciprocate.

Avoid blaming others-recognize your role in creating and managing your own stress.

Don't let things slide-don't keep things inside; let go of problems as they occur.

Avoid self-medication-if there are too many problems that you can't handle, seek professional advice.

Develop a humor library-books, tapes, cartoons. Find things that make you laugh; you can't think about problems when you are laughing.

A Dad Tip

If the arriving home time becomes stressful, talk it over with your spouse and come up with new strategies. One idea might be to have one night a week where the family picks you up and goes out for a quick meal Another may be that dad gets ten minutes in the bedroom before anyone attacks him.

You are a very important person that has been gone all day! While you may have had a stress filled day, your family may not know that. Your arrival triggers the signal that all is well - the family unit is back together. It's time to focus on your family.

Johnny Appleseed Would Have Loved This Festival

JINNY WILT
Adams County correspondent

SOUTH MOUNTAIN (Adams Co.) — A stroll down Cider Press Alley or Apple Butter Way revealed more ways to use an apple than Johnny Appleseed ever dreamed of, the annual National Apple Harvest Festival held Oct. 4-5 and 11-12 at the South Mountain Fairgrounds in Adams County sprouted ideas.

There were the conventional ways such as in pies, fritters, and dumplings, but vendors also sold apple syrup for pancakes and waffles, sausages which were pungent with spices and apples, and scrapple.

The festival, sponsored by Upper Adams Jaycees, has grown in 33 years to a well-organized event that sees at least 20,000 people cross through its gates each of the four days in fall that it is open.

Joan Bucher, festival chairwoman, notes that 800 volunteers made up of Jaycees from groups throughout Adams County and their friends and relatives, make the event happen. When asked how she appeared so calm in the eye of the storm that was swirling about her in the festival office, she winked, and said, "It's all under control."

She added that while the festival for 1997 was taking place outside the office, a meeting had already taken place for the 1998 event.

"We are talking about what we need to change to improve next year's festival," she said. Next year's festival will be held Oct. 3-4 and 10-11.

But, standing in line for a pit beef sandwich, Frances and Neil Courtright of Hellam Township, York County, commented on how efficiently the festival was run. "You can't get lost," Frances said.

One activity at the National Apple Harvest Festival at the South Mountain Fairgrounds in Adams County was a Build-Your-Own-Scarecrow corral. Crates of old clothes and piles of straw were provided for the enjoyment of adults and children.

Brian Davis, 6, of York Springs, was enjoying himself while operating a corn sheller at an exhibit at the National Apple Harvest Festival at the South Mountain Fairgrounds in Adams County. Among other items exhibited were antique tractors and steam engines.

New this year was an antique car show and '50s and '60s music on the Rockin' Apple Stage, and a Dauphin Deposit ATM. Bucher said people come to the festival unaware of how economical the crafts are. "They see something they want to buy and in the past they had no way of getting additional money if they hadn't brought enough along. Now they have a way to get money to make purchases," she said.

Kelly Krebs, president of the Bermudian Jaycees, bantered with volunteers at her group's stand as festival visitors walked through a cafeteria line from which they could choose apple desserts like pie and dumplings. Outside, under a canopy, other volunteers made apple fritters that would benefit her organization.

Krebs explained that the first day of the festival her group sold out of all of their products and had to put a rush order in for more desserts. "Can you imagine opening with nothing to sell," she asked.

Her stand also did so well that in the first weekend they made enough to pay for the stand's rent, making the second week's income all profit, she said. "This (festival) really helps us," she said.

Why don't football fields get muddy?
College and professional football fields aren't like your front lawns, or even most high school fields They have a full-time crew of groundskeepers that use their smarts to keep the grass looking its best — even after four quarters of running, blocking, tackling and passing
First, the grass Groundskeepers plant most ball fields with Kentucky bluegrass That's a certain kind of grass, like beagles are a certain kind of dog
Kentucky bluegrass grows by underground rhizomes Rhizomes are special stems that grow horizontally under the ground Turfgrass blades and roots grow out from the rhizomes The roots help hold the grass in place and helps the pieces that get torn out during a game heal more quickly Kentucky bluegrass is also disease- and heat-tolerant, so it doesn't need a lot of extra care
Even with this great grass, some spots on the field just can't cope with all the heavy play So, the groundskeepers cover the field after every game with ryegrass seed, another kind of grass Because it grows faster than Kentucky bluegrass, it helps keeps the field looking good for the fans and the cameras
All this soil-science works hand-in-hand with the field's design Most pro and college fields have a system of pumps under the field to water the grass and to take away excess water so the field never gets too muddy!

Grange Releases 125th Anniversary Commemorative Cookbook

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Grange members have long been known for their excellent cooking skills. The Grange has printed five superb cookbooks since 1925 and has just released a new one in recognization of its 125th anniversary.

The 488-page "125th Anniversary Pennsylvania State Grange Commemorative Cookbook," promises to be the best one yet. The spiral-bound cookbook is attractive and easy to read, but the most outstanding feature is that none of the recipes have appeared in their previous cookbooks.

Cooks from the 30,000 Pennsylvania Grange membership were asked to submit recipes tested by their families. Rebecca Michalka, women's activities director, "These are recipes made in Grange members' kitchens and tested by Grange families. The recipes in this cookbook contain ingredients that are typically found in most homes."

The cookbook is very accessible and educational.

"Alphabetized sections from A to Z, a table of contents, and an index make the cookbook ideal for cooks on the go," Michalka said. "We also included four pages of information relevant to people who are concerned about leading a healthy lifestyle, and to raise awareness among those who may not be as concerned about their health, but should be."

Four of the previously printed Grange cookbooks are still available. The 1984 (red) edition, and 1972 (white), were recently reprinted due to customer demand. Other Grange cookbooks include the 1925 green hardbound, which sells for $9, and the 1992 green softbound. Grange cookbooks, except the 1925 edition, sell for $13 each. There is a $3 shippinng and handling charge on all books.

Order by sending a check to the Pennsylvania State Grange, 1604 N. Second St., Harrisburg, PA 17102, or by contacting a local Grange member. For more information, call the state office in Harrisburg at 1 (800) 552-3865.

Here are some recipes from the book.

All Gardens Great & Small

The leaves are falling off my Philodendron, what caused it to happen?

Philodendrons are foliage plants adapted to most indoor environment. If you can provide a temperature of 65 degrees and keep philodendron moderately moist and out of direct sunlight, you should be able to grow them.

The philodendron is native to the tropical jungles of Central America. Most species are vines, and the leaves vary from 3 inches to 3 feet in length. Some species are self-heading and require no support.

Philodendron will grow in a variety of materials. Pure peat moss or the newer soil-less mixtures of peat moss and vermiculite or peat and perlite all work well. The growing medium should be fairly organic, but some good quality garden soil can be used to add weight. A ratio of equal parts soil, peat moss and vermiculite or perlite can be used. Avoid a mix that contains all garden soil, and make certain that your growing medium drains well.

Once the plants are established, any commercial house plant fertilizer will keep them in good condition. Liquid and soluble materials can be used at watering time. Slow-release materials can be incorporated into the growing medium. There are also "plant food spikes" available to insert into the growing medium at regular intervals.

These plants grow best in low light and may not require the same amounts of fertilizer as your other plants. A regular feeding program with a slightly higher nitrogen analysis can help increase leaf size, make the plants larger and retain a deeper green leaf color. Philodendron is a heavy feeder under optimum environmental conditions.

One important environmental condition is moisture in the growing medium. Keep the root system uniformly moist at all times and never allow roots to dry out. Serious root injury causes yellowing foliage that eventually drops when too much or too little water is applied. If the plant seems to dry out too quickly, place it in a larger container and increase the percentage of peat moss in the growing medium.

To duplicate the plant's natural habitat you might also want to set it in an area with high humidity. Place a shallow tray of pebbles filled with water under the plant. The tray will collect leachate when the plant is watered and add moisture to the air.

Low light levels are essential for quality growth and foliage. In fact, direct sunlight causes yellow leaves or an irregular spotting. Improper watering and poor light conditions will spell disaster for philodendron.

Indirect light well away from a window is adequate. If you cannot supply any natural light, these plants will do very well in a mixture of fluorescent and incandescent artificial light. A daily illumination of 16 hours is enough to keep many species of philodendron growing for up to 12 months. If you do grow the plants in lower light, move them to a brighter location for a few months each year, especially in the winter.

Small leaves can result from under-fertilization, improper watering, a growing medium that is too hard and very low light levels.

Brown leaves can develop from the build up of salts in the soil caused by the overuse of soluble fertilizer. This is especially a problem if the plant is not watered well enough to leach accumulated salts from the growing medium. Drafts, poor drainage, overwatering, underwatering and no fertilizer will also cause dead foliage.

Yellow leaves that eventually drop result from a wet root system, extremes in the amount of light, high temperatures or possible overall low fertility and lack of nitrogen.

Gradual decline in growth suggests a pot-bound condition, particularly if all other cultural practices have been normal. Slow growth will also result from less than optimum growing conditions or continued use of "softened" water.

Leaves that don't split on some species can be a matter of plant age. Juvenile stages of growth produce entire leaves, and as the plant matures leaves may split. A plant is also more likely to have split leaves if it is growing on a support. Once it extends past the support its leaves revert to the entire form.

Air roots are a normal growth response but can be removed if you desire.

Dust on the foliage should be removed regularly with a light spray of water. A mild soapy solution can also be used as long as the soapy water does not dry on the leaf.

Elm-Penryn 4-H Club

Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club began its year on Oct. 13 with displays by project leaders, member enrollment, and project registration.

Projects being offered by the club for the 1997-98 year include strawberries, family 3-H square dancing, flower arranging, photography, rocketry, fire safety, preserving hairloom photos (creative memories), entomology (the study of insects), rubber stamping, basketry, and basic beginning sewing.

A special meeting to elect club officers will be held at Pleasant View Retirement Community, Manheim, on Monday, Nov. 17 at 6:30 p.m. Regularly scheduled club meetings will be held at Pleasant View on the third Monday of the month from January through June from 6:30 p.m.-8 p.m.

In addition to the monthly club meetings, some club activities will include two service projects designed to benefit the members and the community, a fund-raiser to help offset the expenses of club events and activities, a group project to design and construct an informative window exhibit about our club to enter into area and 4-H fairs, a club scrapbook telling and showing the members' activities, and a social event during the club roundup.

The club is seeking project leaders for cooking, garment sewing, cake decorating, and candy making. These projects (or any of the many others offered by the 4-H youth program of Penn State) may be taught by individuals, teams (co-leaders), or business who wish to support the community by providing skilled employees to lead one or more 4-H projects.

To learn more about the Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club, to register your children for any of the projects offered by the club, or for more information about volunteering as a project leader, contact Cindy Stahl, organizational leader, at (717) 664-2055.

Rural Youth Hold 60th Anniversary Reunion

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — Last Saturday was just like old times for 111 people attending the 60th anniversary reunion of Rural Youth of Lancaster County (RYLC).

Former members reminisced about the fun times and the people they met while mingling at the anniversary banquet held at the Mount Joy Country Table.

From 1936 through 1952, RYLC provided vocational, social, spiritual, and recreational activities for youth. Many members were former 4-H and FFA members. During some of this era, gas rationing was in effect and members carpooled for the monthly meeting. Drama, photography, music, crafts, leadership, and roller skating were a few of the activities in which members participated.

Ed and Jane Diffendall from Montrose attend the Rural Youth of Lancaster County reunion.

These are some of the members who found spouses through participation in RYLC between 1936-1952.

According to Roy Brubaker, a former president of the organization, 68 members of the group met spouses through RYLC activities.

Despite many members moving to other states, close friendships have been maintained, and 60 years later, members get together every few years for a reunion.

Washington countian Maxwell Smith came to the county as a Penn State Agriculture Extension agent in 1936, about the same time RYLC was formed. Max, as he is called, was supportive of reunions and was asked to speak at this year's gathering about "Sixty Years and More."

Some members such as Dick and Elizabeth Conway, who traveled from their North Carolina home just to "hear Smitty again."

They were not disappointed. Smith captured the audience's attention as he recalled his orientation to Lancaster County and the changes he has observed in the past 60 years.

According to him, population has increased from 212,000 to 417,000. To serve the larger population and tourist trade, there are now 589 churches, 378 food stores, and 190 motels. The Farm and Home Center serves 55,000 people each year. The Manheim Auto Auction has grown into the largest auto auction in the world with 1,400 employees selling more than 8,000 cars per week.

Not everything has grown. The number of farms has decreased from 8,000 to 4,800. The Lancaster Stock Yards, which had been the largest east of Missouri, has vastly deteriorated but a granddaughter of Walter Dunlap is now committed to rebuilding it.

The percentage of farmers working at off-the-farm jobs has increased from one percent to 45 percent.

The value of agricultural products, $844,000,000 is still believed to be the highest of any non-irrigated county in the U.S.

Dairy cow numbers more than doubled from 43,000 to 95,000. Annual milk production per cow has tripled, from 6,000 pounds to 18,000 pounds. Poultry egg-layer numbers increased from 1,300,000 to 9,800,000. Eggs per laying hen per year have jumped from 105 to 264. Hog numbers (with leaner carcasses) vaulted from 24,000 to 235,000.

Corn acres increased from 95,000 to 160,000 acres with much higher yields. Tobacco acres decreased from 31,000 to 7,000.

New MoCo's cut cleaner, quieter, and transport easier

Four new John Deere Rotary MoCo's join our current 945 Rotary model for quick, quality haymaking – even in heavy alfalfa. Take your choice of five cutting widths, from the nimble new 8-foot 2-inch 915 to the whopping 14-foot 6-inch mid-pivot 955 – the biggest rotary ever from John Deere.

All five use a new disk rotation system that gives you improved cutting and reduced streaking. All disks rotate toward the center of the platform; there are no areas where disks rotate away from each other so streaking is minimized.

Of course fast, clean cutting is just the start of good haymaking in the East. That's why these new rotaries offer a John Deere exclusive for faster drydown – impeller conditioning. Its unique rubbing action removes the waxy layer from stems so moisture evaporates faster, hay dries quicker, and you bale sooner. Exclusive urethane-roll conditioning is also available.

To further ease the stress of making hay, these new rotaries also run quieter thanks to a new cutterbar gear system And for easy transport on narrow roads and bridges, an optional trailer slims traveling width to under 10 feet.

Size up one for yourself with a visit to your John Deere dealer

Optional Endwise Transport Trailer helps you negotiate narrow gates or bridges by slimming a 955 or 945 MoCo to under 10 feet for transport No tools are required, loading/unloading takes less than 2 minutes

ANSWER — Thanks to Elaine W. Good, Lititz, and her mother, Lydia Hurst Wenger of Landis Homes, for answering Hershey Kurtz's request. Elaine said that her mother and she pulled the words from the recesses of their memories and aren't sure if the words are complete. They do not know the author or composer.

"On the old farmhouse veranda
There sat Silas and Miranda
Thinking of the days gone by.
Said he, "Dearie, don't be weary.
You were always bright and cheery,
But a tear, dear, dims your eye.

Said she, "They're tears of gladness,
Silas, they're not tears of sadness,
For tis, 50 years today since we were wed,"
Then his firm, old heart grew lighter,
And his face became much brighter,
As he turned to her and said,

"Put on your old gray bonnet
With the blue ribbons on it
While I hitch old Dobbin to the shay.
Through the fields of clover
We will ride to Dover,
On our Golden Wedding Day!"

ANSWER — Someone from Purple Martin Conservation of Edinboro University of Pa. sent in these instructions for making bird houses from gourds. For more information, contact the Conservation Association at Edinboro University of Pa., Edinboro, PA 16444.

Harvesting and curing gourds: Because they require a long growing season, gourds should be left in the garden as long as there is life left in the vine. Frost may discolor the gourds but will not harm them. Some growers think that leaving them out all winter improves them for craft work. They can be hung on a line or in a tree. If picking gourds, only take those with stems that have browned or shriveled. If the stem is green and healthy, the gourd can continue to grow until frost. Cut the gourd from the vine, leaving at least 2 inches or more of the stem. Wash the gourd with a solution of bleach or Lysol and water and dry it well. Gourds need 3 to 6 months to dry. The most important factor in curing gourds is time. If the gourd wrinkles or gets soft, it should be discarded. When completely dry, gourds will be a brown color, often mottled from mold and the seeds will rattle. Once well cured, clean the gourd by placing in hot water for a few minutes, then scraping off the outer film and skin. If any cutting is to be done, it is easier to cut while still damp from cleaning.

Gourds should be at least 8-inches in diameter and 6-inches in height. Thick skinned, properly cured gourds with short necks will last longer and provide insulation from heat and cold. White or light colors on the gourds, help reflect the sun's rays and prolongs the usefulness of it, while keeping the interior cooler.

Entrance, drainage, and ventilation: Cut a required size, round entrance hole in the side of each gourd, 3-5 inches from the floor. Remove all pith and seeds. For drainage, bore at least four ¼ -inch holds at the lowest point of the ground floor. Be sure these holes are free of any debris. Approximately 4-inches down from and encircling the neck of the gourd, bore at least four ¼ -inch holes for air circulation. High temperatures of uncirculated air can be fatal to Martins in improperly prepared gourds, causing the nestlings to suffocate or the young birds to leave the nest before they are ready to fly. Adult Martins will actually pull the nestlings out of hot boxes. If these young are unable to fly, many become victims of ground predators.

Grange Celebrates 125-Year History

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — As part of its historic celebration of its 125th anniversary convention, the Pennsylvania State Grange held a several-hour-long pageant depicting its history, in the auditorium of the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Reading on Oct. 25.

The pageant traced the history of the rural organization — its development out of a need for adequate representation for rural Pennsylvanians, and out of a need for a sense of community.

At one time, almost all Americans were familiar with community story telling and pageantry as a means of keeping one's community's history alive and well-remembered, even if historians and book writers have sometimes taken issue with the accuracy of those stories and skits.

And while the practice lingers on in some rural communities in events with names that are similar in theme to, "old home days," it has largely disappeared among those in the vast new neighborhoods of strangers in the look-a-like homes that characterize urban and suburban sprawl.

Perhaps those communities — in ways far removed from the sense of community that remains in the older and more isolated villages and towns — will develop their own types of community stories (other than about each other).

It seems there can be no mistake in observing that all people rely on some form of local story telling to maintain a sense of community goals, fellowship and perspective.

It is a common form of human communication.

Sharing knowledge and opinions of commonly known stories, histories, and landmarks, is part of how we gauge each other, and in many cases, for better or worse, decide who is friend and who is not.

Stories bind people together because they offer a common thread; something each can assess for himself and determine where in his life the needle passes through, pulling that thread of shared history.

From the left, Steve Mohn, Berks County Pomona master, passes the torch to a period-garbed Don Evans, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Grange 125th Anniversary Committee.

Pa. State Grange Region C players portray women protesting for equal constitutional rights.

They give a context.

For the apparently disconnected urban and suburban dwellers, perhaps the glut of globally marketed Hollywood-style movies has already replaced small town pageantry and storytelling as a binder of the community.

Or perhaps the shared stories are the daily horror and shock reports that guise as usefull news, but disappear from memory within minutes or hours, rarely lasting days or weeks.

But to rural Pennyslvanians and those rural at heart, the stories of local and rural histories are often retold and recounted.

Tales of events and happenings of heroic efforts and tragic calamities (according to the perspective of those who keep the stories) serve as the human interest of the stories, though the deeds themselves are deemed important because of the impact they had on the community.

Who from Johnstown has not heard of the Johnstown Flood? Who from Chicago has not heard of the great fire and Mrs. Brown's cow?

For the Pennsylvania State Grange, the history started more than 125 years ago, with one of the original Grange founders Oliver Hudson Kelly credited with visiting Pennsylvania to build knowledge of and support for establishing a State Grange, and for having the self-sacrifice and tenancity to take on the task of traveling the state to organize people.

He traveled to Harrisburg, and without money to continue, there met some others who paid him $15 to talk about the Grange. Kelly continued on a tour of rural Pennsylvania, a fairly dirt-road, isolated world.

Others important to the founding of the state Grange were Luke Ega, David Jauger and Carrie Hall.

Of course, this story is not often repeated outside of the fraternity of the Pennsylvania State Grange, perhaps because it has no significance to non-Grangers — except that it reminds that what the individual does with his time on earth, and in his actions toward and for others, really does matter after all.

It matters mostly to those who inherit the conditions that result from the actions of those individuals who came before.

The Grange pageant was presented in 10 segments, distinguished according to chronological period, and policy and program development.

Each segment contained a cast of costumed performers who portrayed Grange historical figures and period characters.

Each segment also include at least one song, with most segments including an audience participation song.

Starting the afternoon event was the final passing of a torch — a canned fuel torch made by a Granger — that had made its way (as in an Olympic torch relay) across the state during the past year, since last year's convention.

(Turn to Page B20)

The passing of the torch among the different subordinate groups of the Pa. State Grange represents the unity, common goals and common values they share and hope to continue to transfer from one generation to the next. Passing the torch from left to right are Sandy Hill and Joyce Wyatt.

The Collegiate Agriculture Leaders (CAL) Club at Alfred State College tied for first place in the recent Alfred State College Homecoming Parade float competition. After many hours of planning and designing their float entry under the direction of co-chairmen Gwen Harman, New Castle, a senior in the floriculture production program, and Kevin Dougherty, Corry, a freshman in the animal science program, club members decided on "The Moon" as the right touch for the theme of "Pioneers... the Next Frontier." The float, pulled by a championship team of Belgian draft horses, owned by Jim Emo of Bath, displayed a cow jumping over the moon, a cow riding a space ship, several stars to add to the celestial atmosphere, flowers donated by the Alfred State flower shop, and two large signs parroting the current ubiquitious slogan with a twist: "Got Milk... To Go." The $400 prize money will help fund a student trip to the Royal Winter Agricultural Fair in Toronto, Canada, Nov. 14-16.

Representatives from each of the state's subordinate Granges lined the perimeter of the auditorium and handed the torch to each other.

As the torch made its way clockwise around the audience, the crowd slowly turned, people craning to watch its progress. Young and old, men and women, passed the torch solemnly until it made its way up onto, and across the stage, past a banner procclaiming the 125th anniversary, to be presented to Donald Evans (of Penn State University) who placed the torch at the front center of the stage, where it remained for the duration of the pageant.

Evans served as chairman of the 125th Anniversary Committee, along with members representing eight Grange regions in the state: Carol McCullon, Jennifer Viscusi, and Martha Sherman from Region A; James Grant and Mary Himes from Region B; Arlan Higley, Gloria Higley, and Gordon Hiller (past master) from Region C; June Marzani, Hedy Chaffee, and Richard Seidof from Region D; Netter Martsolf, W. Roger Parry, Linda Parry, and Lois Moore from Region E; David Hay and Betty Grove from Region F; Judy Pressler, Brian Ebersole, Nancy Cole, Betty Diamond and Dr. James Diamond from Region G; and Clifford Holloway, Dr. Arba Henry, and Nettie Kauffman from Region H.

Also serving on the committee were Grange Master William Steel, and Jim Mentzer, its public relations director.

Having the 125th anniversary celebration held in Reading was signficant, because the first convention was held in Reading.

Evans narrated the first segment dealing with the founding of the Grange, followed by a segment portraying the establishment of the state and subordinate seal.

Just as with the other segments, the presentation of the establishment of the seal was done with pageantry, and different, costumed performers carried each element of the seal out on stage to result in a life-sized version of the seal.

The chorus of State Grange members from Region D sings period songs (1922-1938), while Tom Purdy and Flo Hunter portray Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot.

From the left, Jennifer Viscusi portrays Carrie Hall, while David Hay portrays Oliver Hudson Kelley, two of the founders of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

According to the narration, "On Jan. 7, 1874, the first annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Grange was held at the Patriarch Grange No. 42 in Harrisburg. Fifty-two delegates answered the roll call.

"It was decided that all fourth degree members in attendance be permitted to take part in all discussions."

One of the discussion items was the seal. After such discussion, it was decided that the seal should represent the farm and those who toil the soil.

It was decided the seal should have a seven-sided background, representing the seven founders of the order.

On the seven-sided shape was placed a sheaf of wheat to represent God's bounty for all, and that all should be good stewards.

A plow was included because it breaks up and prepares the soil for planting. According to narrator Evans, "This should teach us to drive the plowshare of thought diligently through the heavy soil of ignorance and thus prepare the mind for the growth of knowledge and wisdom."

The ax was also added, because, as it was used to clear out fields, "Its use teaches us perserverance in overcoming obstacles."

A spade was added because it is used to dig deeper than the plow. "It is the emblem of thoroughness," Evans said.

The rake, or harrow, was placed upon the seal, because as the tool is used for more detailed work — pulverizing soil and covering seed — "It is emblematic of the study and observation need to fully run your life or business."

The hoe was added because it was used to weed and stir the soil. It represented that "... cultivation of the mind promotes the growth of knowledge and wisdom."

The spud — a weeding instrument used to get those missed by the hoe — was added. "It is a reminder to get rid of all dissension and strife."

The pruning knife or spear, beaten into a pruning hook, was added because it was made by converting a weapon into a farming tool. It is a symbol of peace. "It should always remind you to preserve peace with your fellow men."

A shepherd's crook is on the seal because, "It is emblematic of the care and guidance need to care for the weak and innocent."

The seal also contains a sickle. "It is a reminder of honorable employment, preaching its sermon of present propserity and peace. It represents a future of plenty and rejoicing."

The only non-tool, other than the sheaf of wheat, on the seal is a type of rock, agate. Agate is a quartz rock with various, usually with fine-grained patterns of different colors. It is used as a sign of friendship.

"May your principles of life be as firmly impressed as the lasting colors in the stone, and may your friendships be as lasting as the stone itself," Evans said.

The next segments recalled the events and circumstances of the period and what role the Grange played in working to better the standard of living for all rural Americans.

Pa. State Grange Master William Steel stands next to the podium and holds the anniversary torch, while the cast of the 125th anniversary pageant gather behind for the grand finale.

Former state and national master of the Grange, John W. Scott talks about his tenure and the organization's achievements, while Clifford Holloway holds the torch. Each master passed the torch to the next as they took turns discussing Grange events under their watch. Seated, from the left, is former state master A. Wayne Readinger, Faye Snyder for the late J. Luther Snyder, (behind Scott and the podium) Francis Steese for the late Robert Steese, Charles Wismer, William Ringler, and Gordon Hiller.

From the terms of United States' presidents Grover Cleveland, William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, etc., through wars and Depression, the pageant and narration and skits recalled the setbacks, growth, challenges and victories of the Grange.

Some of the history lessons demonstrated how the same problems facing people then continue today — keeping people in leadership cognizant of the results of their decisions.

For example, a segment discussed the first creation of oleomargarine.

"Oleo was first developed as the result of a contest in France, conducted by Napoleon III, in an effort to find a satisfactory substitute for butter during the Franco-Prussian War of 1870," according to the narrator.

"It was first made by churning the liquid part of beef fat together with milk, water, and a vegetable dye. It was introduced into the United States in 1874, and immediately farmers and dairymen throughout the nation ... protested that oleomargarine could ruin the butter market."

The Grange took up the cause. Political pressure from rural America help support protective taxation that punished those who manufactured and sold the dyed oleo, and made it easier to make and sell undyed (gray or tallowy looking) oleo. It helped preserve real butter and dairy farms.

Rural-free delivery was also made possible through efforts by the Grange, and it changed rural life. The same is true with rural electrification.

Women's rights, the opening of the Grange membership to women and then children, the establishment of the State Grange youth camp 50 years ago and recognition of Betty Norris, superintendent of the Juvenile Grange, who started the camp, were just a part of the historical drama.

While the Grange doesn't normally hold such pageantry during its annual meetings, this one was performed in recognition of the 125th anniversary.

The last segment of the event was a recollection of their tenures as master of the State Grange by eight former masters or their spouses.

Past masters present and their terms were J. Collins Mcsparran, 1956-1962; John Scott, 1962-1968; A. Wayne Readinger, 1968-1974; Faye Snyder for J. Luther Snyder, 1974-1979; Francis Steese for Robert Steese, 1979-1979; Charles Wismer Jr., 1979-1988; William Ringler, 1988-1992; and Gordon Hiller, 1992-1996.

Current master William Steel came out on stage lastly, and held the torch as the entire cast joined him and the audience in singing, "It's a Good Thing To Be a Granger."

Susquehanna County 4-H News

Dimock Community Club meeting was held Oct. 17. Ben Hibbard, Jessica Hibbard, and Shana Mack talked about achievement night.

This year, the 4-H program included "Blue Ribbon Clubs." A Blue Ribbon club is a 4-H club that gets points by completing projects, doing community service, handing in news reports, and completing other important tasks. This year, there were two clubs that qualified. They were Deckertown and Dimock Community clubs. Five hundred points were needed to qualify and Dimock earned 558.

Ben Hibbard discussed "leaf pick-up" on Nov. 1. He also talked about the County Council meeting, which he recently attended.

The club had a guest speaker, Isabella Rodriguez. She came from Brazil as a foreign exchange student. She said that she only had to go to school from 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. In Brazil, temperatures sometimes skyrocket to 110 degrees. She also discussed how her food is different because they use a lot of onion and garlic.

The Dimock 4-H Club members thank Isabella for coming. The next meeting will be on Saturday, Nov. 15 at 5 p.m. That is Club Recognition Night. Each member is reminded to bring a bottle of soda and a can of food for the Feed-A-Friend Program.

Young Competitors Visit Grazing Acres

NEW LONDON (Chester Co.) — Younger children were the stars at the Sept. 7 open schooling horse show held here at Grazing Acres Farm.

Some of the most competitive classes were in mini-mini stirrup, mini stirrup, and short stirrup divisions. Monica Smullen of Scroggy Road, Oxford, was the only child with two first-place finishes in these divisions. There was also a good turnout for the halter class and serious but good-spirited competition for the cash awards in the pleasure division.

The outside course, ridden by competitors in the hunter division, was enlarged; and plans call for further expansion of this course for next year's show series.

Judge for the show was Brian Bradley of Newark, Del. Ringmasters were Jimmy Healy of New London and Hope Woollens of Landenberg. Show secretary was Carol Shortlidge of West Grove. Sue Wilson of East Fallowfield served as announcer.

A new award this year recognizes the trainer bringing the most competitors to the KA Equestrian Center — Grazing Acres Horse Shows. (Dawn McCuen of KA Equestrian is excluding herself from the competition). A trainer who brings a large group to one show has as good a chance of winning as a trainer with fewer entries over several shows, and vice versa.

INDUSTRY SUPPORTED RESEARCH PROGRAMS ARE UP AND RUNNING

William D. Weaver, Jr.
Professor

The initial proposal to fund industry supported poultry research at Penn State was presented to the departmental Industry Advisory Committee at its spring committee meeting in 1994. From that first effort over three years ago broiler and table egg research programs have evolved to specifically address needs with direct applications to Pennsylvania poultry producers.

To fund the two programs the industry agreed to voluntarily check-off 10 cents a ton on feed consumed by breeders, broilers, pullets and layers housed in the state. Currently the two separate funds are generating approximately $60,000 and $45,000 annually for broiler and table egg research, respectively.

Two review committees have been appointed to represent the broiler and egg industries and are responsible for setting priorities for the research, reviewing the research proposals and establishing the level of funding for each project. The broiler committee consists of Jim Adams, Wenger Feeds, Inc.; Mickey Baugher, Empire Kosher Poultry, Inc.; Dave Johnson, College Hill Poultry; Mark Lovette, Tyson Foods, John Martin, Longenecker's Hatchery; Dave Petroski, Kreamer Feeds; and Bruno Schmalhofer, Farmer's Pride, Inc., with Dr. John Fidler, Pennfield Corporation serving as its chair. The egg committee is chaired by Jim Adams and consists of Ron Gayman, Hillside Poultry Farm, Mel Gehman, Heritage Poultry Management Systems, Inc., and Bob Kreider, Hy-line International. I serve as an ex-officio member on each committee.

To date the broiler program has funded seven projects totaling $92,579. While I won't discuss the details of any of the projects (if you have an interest in a particular project or projects please contact me or one of the committee members), I am listing the titles and names of the investigators from the funded research proposals:

1. Developing new strategies to enhance bone mineralization and reduce skeletal abnormalities - Roland M. Leach, Jr.
2. Methods to alleviate heat stress in market broilers - R. Michael Hulet and William B. Roush

Beef Club Holds Roundup, Sale

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Franklin County 4-H Baby Beef Club held its annual roundup and sale recently.

There were 24 steers under a tent at the Greencastle Livestock Market parking lot. Ken Winebark from Myerstown, was the judge.

Justin Conner also showed the grand champion steer and Jodi Meyers of Greencastle showed the reserve champion.

The club also held the steer sale at 7 p.m. The youth had the Greencastle Livestock Market decorated with green and white streamers, balloons, and banners to welcome buyers and spectators to the overcrowded barn. President Jimmy Clapsaddle welcomed the people to the sale.

Pennsylvania DHIA Year-End Reports

The end-of-year results of Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement records for 1997 (open to the public) show that one of the Pa.DHIA top-10 production herds (on a rolling herd basis) of the past several years has made it to the number one position, while a cow owned by Frederick Farms, of Martinsburg was the top producer for protein and milk.

The top Pa.DHIA herd rolling herd average for protein and milk belonged to Jacob III and Sally Tanis of Centre Hall, whose 95-cow herd made an average of 31,393 pounds milk, 1,171 pounds of fat and 984 pounds of protein. The herd ranked second for average fat production.

Second place herd for protein production on a rolling herd basis was the 75-cow herd of Fantasyland Hoslteins in Robesonia, which had received Pa.DHIA's top management award several years ago. That herd was also ranked third in the state for milk production with an overall RHA of 30,285 pounds of milk, 1,1042 pounds of fat and 972 pounds of protein.

The top, per-cow fat-producing herd was that of Blossom Hollow farm in Commodore, with 35 cows each making 24,543 pounds of milk, 1,174 pounds fat, and 771 pounds of protein.

The third-place herd for average production per cow for protein and fat was owned by RV and SV Hollenshead of Mercersburg. Their 145 cows made 29,435 pounds of milk, 1,163 pounds of fat and 966 pounds of protein.

The second place leader for milk production was the Scot Lyn Dairy in Rome, with 45 cows making an average of 30,877 pounds of milk, 1,147 pounds of fat and 959 pounds of protein.

The top producing cow for protein and milk was No.23, owned by Frederick Farms. She made 49,405 pounds of milk with 1,646 pounds of protein and 1,702 of fat.

The top fat producing cow was "Karol," owned by Curtis and Ann Day of Tri-Day Holsteins in Shippensburg. She made 47,256 pounds of milk, 1,290 pounds of protein and 2,153 pounds of fat.

Juniperdale Farm in Nazareth had two high producing cows. Its Lara cow made 47,305 pounds of milk, 1,283 pounds of protein and 2,153 pounds of fat to be listed as second for milk and third for fat. The farm's Amereto cow mad 44,229 pounds of milk, 1,331 pounds of protein and 2,464 pounds of fat to be listed as second highest for fat production.

Solid Gold Holsteins of Emlenton had the second and third place protein cows for Pa.DHIA. The farm's Lacey cow made 44,774 pounds of milk, 1,464 pounds of protein and 1,936 pounds of fat. Its Devin cow made 43,832 pounds milk, 1,424 pounds of protein and 1,893 pounds of fat.

The lowest somatic cell count in milk is also recognized because it indicates milk quality. The lowest SCC for the year was 69,000 on a 51-cow mixed herd of Holsteins owned by Art and Barb Rutledge of Damascus.

Second for SCC recognition was a 41-cow herd of registered Holsteins owned by Greg and Sheryl Seeley of Canton, which was tied with the 45-cow herd of registered Holsteins owned by Ron and Beth Ruffaner of Worthington.

Pa.DHIA year-end results are based on September results. The rest of the year, the top producing herds and cows are reported monthly.

Cattlemen Turn Internet Into Marketing Advantage

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — The ability to list cattle early and often is a big benefit of the Internet, thinks Tom McConnell, an extension farm management specialist and associate professor at West Virginia University, Morgantown, W. Va.

That's why he recommended the West Virginia Cattlemen's Association begin posting its sales dates on Cattle Offerings Worldwide (COW), a worldwide database and web site (www.cattleofferings.com). COW matches buyers and sellers of both beef and dairy cattle and genetics.

The West Virginia Cattlemen's Association was organized about 20 years ago to enhance education and marketing opportunities for the state's beef cattle producers, said McConnell. The association has about 625 members.

McConnell suggests that the Internet fits well with the association's ongoing marketing objectives.

"The Internet is a natural progression of the cattle marketing evolution. Buyers have gradually become confident in cattle described on paper and no longer necessarily need to see the animals. People have become accustomed to buying cattle by grades," he said.

Cattle marketing has evolved to include satellite broadcasts and telemarketing, where buyers can bid through a computer keyboard. The Internet, said McConnell, also allows buyers to buy cattle based on descriptions. But the potential audience is even larger.

The extension specialist first learned about COW when browsing Successful Farming's @griculture Online web site (www.agriculture.com). @g Online is considered to be the world's most visited agricultural web site, receiving nearly five million "hits" per month. COW is listed on @g Online's front page. Anyone who accesses @g Online can easily find the link to the COW web site and its listings.

"@griculture Online was very pleased to create a partnership with COW," said John Walter, @g Online editor. "COW's database capabilities make it one of the most useful tools on the Web for agriculture. It harnesses the powers of a database operating over the Net, which greatly expands the abilities of buyers and sellers to publicize their services and control information daily. COW and its partners have created a powerful tool for breed associations, marketers, cattle buyers, feedlots and individual commercial and seedstock producers."

McConnell also met Ben Zaitz, COW's founder, at an agricultural computing seminar. Zaitz is a third generation family dairyman, whose offices are in Chapel Hill, N.C., and Purchase, N.Y. Combining his knowledge of the cattle business and interest in telecommunications, Zaitz established COW to match buyers and sellers of dairy and beef cattle and genetics. He likens COW to the multiple listing service (MLS) that the real estate industry uses to help buyers narrow their search.

After the two men talked, McConnell proposed that the association try listing some cattle on COW. In March, the organization used the service to announce it would offer at auction 12,000 feeder cattle through 11 markets on 19 sale dates.

Why get involved with COW? "I think the Internet is where the industry is going. The quicker you get in the game, the easier it is to keep up," said McConnell.

Zaitz said that because there is so much information on the Internet, more people will use it in their businesses. He points to the number of people who have accessed COW over the last 15 months as an example. "It has quadrupled. People are doing about 8,000 searches of our database per month. People are in there looking, and the technology does the work of putting buyers and sellers together," he said. "If you're not on the Internet, you're missing a level of information that others are getting."

The Internet and COW also give seedstock producers an excellent opportunity to showcase their genetics and find better matches between bulls and cow herds, said McConnell. He says a large group of seedstock producers wants to include farmers who regularly buy bulls on the Internet. The association plans to post future performance-tested bull sales on COW.

McConnell thinks sellers could benefit most from the Internet by listing sales early and regularly updating them. Buyers who want a certain number of trailer load lots, for example, can then plan accordingly, he said. He would like to see buyers and sellers using the Internet to communicate on a weekly basis.

One of the advantages of COW is that Internet users can "hotlink" back to the West Virginia Cattlemen's home page and view listings, says McConnell. The home page may be located on COW, or elsewhere at the Cow member's choosing.

While the West Virginia Cattlemen's Association has been on COW only a short time, its presence there already has proven beneficial. "We have received responses from people wanting more information, and we give them the number of the marketing facility," said McConnell. "The Internet presence will put us in a stronger marketing position. This should mean more income in the future."

"COWS buyers and sellers are matched by completing a form that asks them to specify farm name and address, breed, type of cattle or genetics, grade, vaccinations and other information. When a seller posts listings through COW, we notify interested buyers by e-mail, fax or mail. Buyers also can send e-mail, fax or mail inquiries to find cattle and genetics," said Zaitz.

Buying and selling is facilitated through COW Data Sites (CDS) and Searchable Classified Ads (SCA). An organization or farm can control and update listings of animals, embryo or semen on the CDS. SCAs (searchable online "Wanted" or "For Sale" ads) appear on the COW web site, and are automatically compared with all new CDS listings. All matches are notified during the time the SCA remains on the datebase.

Farm Bill Shifts All Crop Insurance Sales From USDA To Private Agents

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced that crop insurance will be available exclusively through crop insurance agents, beginning in the 1998 crop year.

Previously, the catastrophic level of crop insurance (CAT) was available through both local USDA Farm Service Agency offices and crop insurance agents in 36 states.

Glickman said this decision was made after carefully reviewing the number of crop insurance agents in each state to ensure that an adequate sales force is in place to provide all farmers with CAT coverage. The 1996 Farm Bill requires USDA to transfer the sales of CAT coverage entirely to the private sector if a sufficient number of agents are available to each state to provide this service.

"While the sales and servicing of policies will be done by the private sector," Glickman said, "this change will not weaken the existing safety net for producers. I am determined that everyone will have access to crop insurance — large farmers and small farmers alike, especially those with limited resources, minorities, and producers in all areas of the country.

"Before making this decision, private company representatives gave me their commitment to reach out to all America's farmers and to assure that the highest level of risk management service is extended to everyone," Glickman said. "I look forward to this partnership. I also intend to exercise appropriate oversight over the companies to ensure compliance with their commitment."

Glickman said this decision was made after carefully reviewing the number of crop insurance agents in each state to ensure that an adequate sales force is in place to provide all farmers with CAT coverage. This review is required by the 1996 Farm Bill, which also requires USDA to transfer the sales of CAT coverage entirely to the private sector if a sufficient number of agents are available in each state to provide this service.

USDA will continue to subsidize all policies, establish policy terms and conditions, set rates, and guarantee funds for the payment of approved claims.

The transfer begins with the 1998 fall planted crops. Policyholders will receive a letter informing them of this change in about one month. However, producers are to continue to go to the local FSA office for service on 1997 policies. This includes reporting 1997 planted acreage and production as well as any losses.

Although a producer's policy will be randomly transferred from USDA to an insurance company, producers may select another agent or insurance company if they do so before the sales closing date for the insured crop. To insure that all producers are served, insurance companies are required to insure all eligible crops and provide all levels of coverage in the states in which they operate. Further, participating companies must insure all qualified applicants.

Waiver of administrative fees for producers who qualify as limited resource farmers is required by the risk management agency and is available through private companies. Private agents are prepared to assist those qualifying producers with certification of their status.

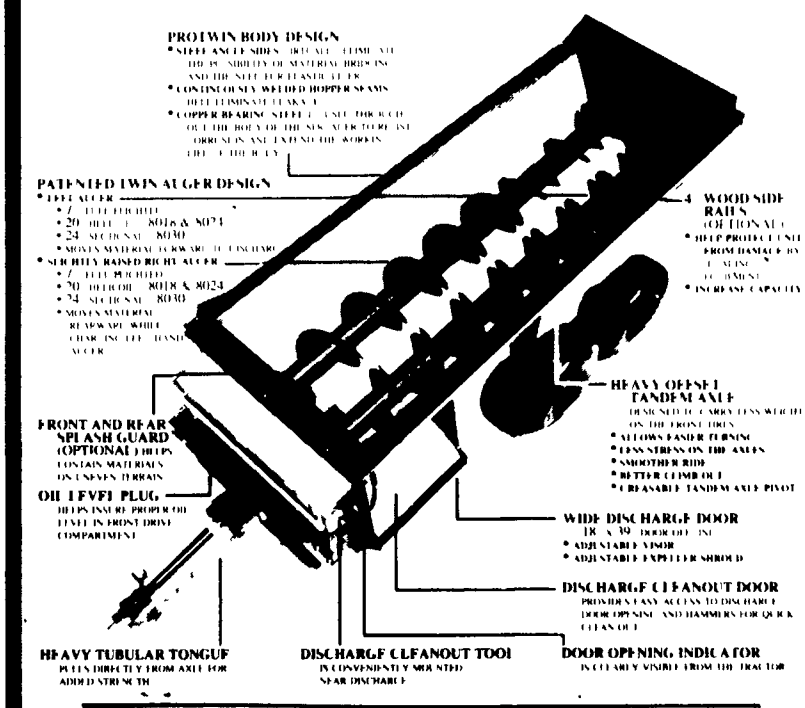
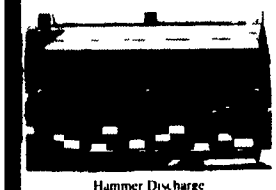
8000 SERIES PRO TWIN SLINGERS Revolutionizes The V Spreader Concept

The 8000 Series ProTwin Slingers can handle a wider range of materials than any other spreader. If you have pen pack, sticky feed lot or slurry-type material that needs to be spread fast and spread evenly, you need the Knight ProTwin Slinger.





Hammer Discharge

Patented Free Swinging Hammer Expeller

Forged Steel Hammer

Each hammer has cast in bushing and replaceable manganese steel wear pad

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on a 2½" shaft. The hammers pivot on ⅞" bolts with nylon anti seize type bushings that allow free movement. The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material peeling it off and slinging it underhand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps. The 3" wide free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects. Each hammer is faced with a work hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement. The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width. This proven hammer expeller design enables fine spreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed.

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected. Bearings, chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance.

50 YEARS OF SILO FILLING!

Marlin Brubaker at Little Britain Ag Supply is in his 50th year of custom silo filling. And this year, with a Claas 860 Harvester, he harvested over 2,000 acres. Congratulations!

At M.M. Weaver & Sons, Inc., we admire Marlin Brubaker's steadfastness and we're pleased to have been able to serve him through the years. In 1993 he bought the first Claas 695 Harvester we sold, in 1995 he bought our first 860 Claas Harvester, and in 1997 Marlin bought our first Row Independent Corn Head. Thanks for your business.

The header shown below is the one Marlin Brubaker used this year to harvest 2,000 acres of corn.

HARVEST CORN NO MATTER THE ROW SPACING WITH NEW RU450 INDEPENDENT CORN HEAD

Claas of America offers the RU 450 row independent converging corn head for its self-propelled forage harvesters. The RU 450 enables corn to be harvested no matter the row spacing or direction harvested and features a working width of 14'9".

The head features three rotating drums which cut and deliver the crop Double transport discs on each drum capture the corn plants for crop delivery The mowing disc, located under the transport discs, cuts the crop and then delivers it to the feed augers The three-symmetrical rotors assure even crop flow to the feed rollers

The chainless rotor drive system is made up of universal drive shafts and oil bath gearboxes Drives are protected by low maintenance overload clutches With fewer moving parts than a conventional corn head, the RU 450 requires less maintenance resulting in higher output Transport of the head is done by activating a hydraulic valve from the cab which folds the outer rotors into a vertical position

MADE FOR HARD WORK AND HEAVY LOADS

The choice of farmers in North America year after year. New Holland box spreaders can be counted on to do the heavy work that can't wait.

The Model 155 can handle up to 217 bushels on one load. The rugged A-frame hitch carries the load safely from below and does not pull it from the front.

Of course, you'll get sides and floor boards FREE for 12 years, if they fail. And only your New Holland dealer can offer this Bonded Protection.

It Wasn't Raining When Noah Built His Ark...

But I bet he was glad he built it when that big rain came. Plan ahead. Keep Vitamix on hand. You will be glad you did; the first time your cow or calf gets symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

Use Vitamix For...

*Cows after calving.
*Every virus.
*Every infection.
*Every contagious disease.
*Mastitis & Scours.
*When your cow or calf is off feed.
*Vitamix is for every dairyman who wants to stay in business.

*Vitamix costs less than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is all natural.
*Vitamix is faster than antibiotics.
*Vitamix is free from side effects.
*Vitamix is for anything one animal can catch from another.

You can use Vitamix if you have already used antibiotics and sulfa drugs; but antibiotics and sulfa drugs damage the immune system and it takes longer for your cows and calves to recover if you used antibiotics first.

You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix.

Do you remember when you raised 100 calves without losing a calf? If you are too young to remember that, ask a dairyman over 50 years old. Remember when staff mastitis and a lot of the common diseases of today were practically unheard of? Ask a Dairyman over 50 years old. All that was before the routine use of antibiotics. Use of antibiotics is like a revolving door; treating for the symptoms of another treatment. Get off the medical merry go round. Keep some Vitamix on hand.

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 60 cases of calf scours and it costs only $60.00 (when you get it by the five gallon bucket).

One gallon of Vitamix is typically enough for about 8 cases of mastitis. ($7.50 per cow). You save five days milk when you use Vitamix instead of antibiotics. Save about $40.00 per each case!!!

Vitamix is made by the same people who make Formula M.

VITAMIX, when you need a miracle!!!.

Fall in the Orchard

Watch for Early Color As we enter the fall season, orchard trees begin to enter the dormant period. The change in leaf color from green to yellow and the eventual dropping of leaves is a normal part of this process. However, as you observe your orchard you may notice that some trees color and lose their leaves ahead of others in the same block. This may not be normal and could indicate stressed trees.

Stressed trees are more likely to suffer winter injury and may also tend to decline further and die next season. Causes of stress include disease such as collar rot or Alternaria or in stone fruits possibly stem pitting. This year's drought could also be causing stress in the orchard Note these early-coloring trees and reduce or eliminate the cause of the stress if possible

Jim Travis from the Pathology Department at Penn State notes that growers who establish stone fruit orchards in nematode infested sites sometimes experience significant tree loss as early as 3,4 or 5 years after planting due to stem pitting. Infected trees decline and die over a period of 2-3 years after the symptoms first appear.

Fall is an excellent time to detect newly infected trees. Infected trees may or may not show a noticeable reduction in growth but the leaves will turn color and drop earlier compared to neighboring healthy trees Single trees may show symptoms but it is also common to find clusters of infected trees or several trees in a row with symptoms.

An assay for dagger nematodes will help confirm the diagnosis When taking nematode samples from infected areas it is best to take soil from around trees that appear reasonably strong Nematodes will stop feeding and move away from severely diseased and dead trees.

I am aware of two peach orchards in the county with high nematode populations so be sure to consider this as a possible cause of trees stress in your orchard.

Consider a Fall Fungicide Application

I saw a few peach orchards this year where there was an infection of bacterial spot. This disease overwinters in cankers on the twigs of the tree and can be a problem on the fruit if weather conditions favor infection early in the season.

Post-bloom applications of Mycoshield should control the disease during the growing season but you can also make a fall application of copper that may help with control. Some growers are making a fall application of fungicide to control peach leaf curl so if you had problems with either of these diseases this year I'd encourage you look into a leaf-drop spray to potentially reduce overwintering spores and bacteria for next year.

Copper sprays are necessary to control bacteria while leaf curl can be controlled with either copper, Bravo, or Ziram. Consult the Commercial Tree Fruit Production Guide or your chemical supplier for proper formulations and rates of these compounds to apply in your orchard.

Fall Weed Control

Fall is a good time of year to consider orchard weed control. A weedy orchard is the ideal haven for mice and voles and their feeding during the winter can cause significant tree damage or even death. Removal of this cover of weeds may help vole predators control these pests. Weather conditions may also be more favorable for herbicide applications in the fall. Increased rainfall for activation requirements and less sunlight for slower chemical breakdown are two advantages that come to mind.

Rob Crassweller, tree fruit specialist at Penn State, notes that late fall applications of herbicides can help you over that "hump" in the early spring when you do not have adequate time to apply a material before weed seeds germinate.

Herbicides applied at this time of year should include a translocated postemergent material such as 2,4- D or glyphosate. These materials will help control emerged annual winter broadleaf weeds and to control or reduce pressure from established perennial weeds.

The addition of a pre-emergent broadleaf or grass material will give additional extended control A good approach is the use of split applications of such materials as Simazine, Solicam, Surflan, or Devrinol Sinbar should not be applied in the fall due to its high potential for leaching and subsequent loss of effectiveness.

Kerb is a grass material that has been around for a number of years and is only registered to be applied in the fall

In following up next spring either make the second application of the split rate applied in the previous fall or use a different material for greater diversity in control Some good fall combinations include Solicam at 2.0 lb/A + Simazine at 1.5 lb ai /A, Solicam at 2 0 lb/A + Diuron 1 0 lb ai/A, or Diuron at 2.0 lb ai/A + Surflan at 2.0 qt/A Not all of these combinations will work in all situations and you should choose the material based upon the weed species you have present

For those growers who have dandelion problems, fall is the most desirable time to apply 2,4-D for the control of dandelions and other broadleaf weeds in sod covers. Remember that dandelions compete for bees during bloom so control of this weed is important in any orchard where there may be a shortage of pollinators during spring bloom

In addition, broadleaf weeds are hosts for nematodes so you are providing a food source for these pests as well Efforts spent eradicating weeds from your orchards are sure to be time well-spent

Control Weeds in Strawberries Too

Fall is also the time of year to clean-up weeds in strawberry plantings. The same weather advantages discussed above for orchards also apply to, strawberry weed control In addition, you know what your weed problems were this year so you can direct your efforts toward the problem weeds Fall applied herbicides are Devrinol and Sinbar.

Devrinol controls annual grasses and some broadleaves and can be applied after an adequate number of runners have rooted Note that this compound must be watered in within one week at this time of year

Sinbar should be applied after the plants are dormant and does not need to be watered in Some growers wait until spring to apply Sinbar because it can be leached from the soil. However, if we have a wet spring you may not be able to get onto your fields to make the application

Perennial weeds such as dandelion are also best controlled in the fall Use 2,4-D after the strawberry plants are dormant but while the weeds are still alive A warm day also will help the 2,4-D be absorbed by the weeds and increase the effectiveness of this compound

Weeds that are not controlled with the herbicides discussed may need to be hand weeded now to help prevent them from becoming a problem next spring Fortunately this is a slower time of the year so hopefully you can accomplish this task

Retailers Association Convention Expo Set

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The Agricultural Retailers Association (ARA) will be celebrating its fifth anniversary at its Convention & Expo here Dec. 3-4.

Hundreds of retailers will attend to learn more about their industry and how to improve their business.

This year's theme is "Leading the Field." The convention's high impact programs are designed to keep ARA members the leaders in their industry as their business environment continues to evolve.

Michael Bergdahl, vice president of human resources for American Eagle Outfitters, will be the keynote speaker. This former Wal-Mart and PepsiCo executive will tell attendees the secrets to outperforming the pack.

Highlights of the convention include programs providing an economic outlook for the upcoming year, a briefing on environmental laws and information about increasing the added value of one's retail business. Current issues such as spray drift and narrow-row corn will be discussed. A special spouses and guests program features women's health issues. There will also be programs for ARA's Food For Thought ambassadors about how to make a favorable impact for agriculture in your community.

In addition, multi-grammy nominee, Suzy Bogguss, will entertain the group following the banquet on Thursday night, Dec. 4.

"Our convention creates a forum for retailers to improve their knowledge of the industry," said Paul Kindinger, ARA president and CEO. "This allows them to better serve their customers, thereby improving their business. This year's program provides information critical for retailers to stay ahead and lead their field."

Badger Introduces Liquid Manure Transports

ST. NAZIANZ, Wis. — Badger Farm Systems has introduced a new line of liquid manure transports including four models with 2,300-, 3,000-, 4,200-, or 5,200-gallon capacities.

The round tank design with domed ends provides extra capacity and maximum strength. Forward slope design maintains drawbar weight as tank is emptied.

The large square 30-inch x 30-inch fill opening is in the rear. The combination of rear fill, forward slope design and front unload prevents settling in the dead end.

Front mounted pump allows over the top discharge and a short drive line, 540 or 1000 RPM. There is in-tank agitation, full pressure injection, and rear or side discharge. Over the top spreading prevents accidental dumping of loads. Front mounted level indicator, especially useful when injection units are being used. Hydrualic drive motor is optional.

The two larger models use semitrailer axles and brakes with up to 2½ times as much brake capability as disk brakes. They are hydrualically actuated from the cab, providing braking forward and reverse, uphill and downhill.

Badger Farm Systems has introduced a new line of liquid manure transports including four models with 2,300-, 3,000-, 4,200-, or 5,200-gallon capacities.

The two smaller models have hydraulically actuated ag brakes, also cab controlled, with optional choice of the semitrailer brake and axle system. Adjustable axle setting allows adjusting of weight on drawbar, and rebalancing when injection units are added.

Fixed or floating injectors are available with shovels or sweeps for injection or incorporation. Tool bar allows selection of application method.

For long-lasting protection, tanks are sandblasted, primed with epoxy primer and top coated with polyurethane. A wide selection of tires is available, and transport lights are standard.

Hoffman Is Distributor of Novartis Seeds

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds, Inc. recently became the exclusive distributor, producer, and marketer of Novartis Seeds products in 13 northeastern states.

"It is Hoffman Seeds' thorough understanding of the needs of the eastern farmer that guaranteed its place as the exclusive distributor of Novartis Seeds products," said Fred Lepley, president of Hoffman Seeds. "Novartis Seeds has a strong national and international presence and Hoffman Seeds is a powerful regional company. We'll be bringing elite products and technology into a region we've been specializing in for the past 100 years."

Hoffman Seeds' exclusive agreement with Novartis means that it will provide the northeastern farmer with new corn hybrids and technology to increase production and profitability. This "Maximizer™ Technology" allows northeastern growers the choice of technologies that are best suited for their particular farming operation and weather conditions. Additionally, Hoffman Seeds will continue in its role as the farmer's source for top-performing products, including Funk's G® Brand and NK® Brand corn hybrids.

Hoffman Seeds will produce, distribute and market all Novartis Seeds NK Brand corn, soybeans, alfalfa, and grain and forage sorghum in the following states: Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and part of Virginia.

Variety Offers Leafhopper Resistance

TIPTON, Ind. — Pioneer introduced and sold the first alfalfa variety with true leafhopper resistance in the spring of 1997. Data from Pioneer and university tests showed this technology is very effective at increasing forage yield under leafhopper pressure.

A number of key events have impacted the perceived success of this product. One of the most significant was the widespread and extraordinary leafhopper pressures encountered in the summer of 1997.

The genetic advantage of leafhopper resistance has been proven even under extremely severe infestations encountered during the 1997 growing season. Under unsprayed conditions, forage yield advantages of one half ton per acre were obtained from 5347LH, compared to that from leafhopper susceptible varieties.

This clearly demonstrates the added value of the new technology. This advantage of growing 5347LH and gaining additional yield under leafhopper pressure gives, on average, a $405 per bag increased value.

Early promotion and positioning of Pioneer® brand 5347LH alfalfa variety developed in the minds of many the idea of a product with a genetic suit of body armor against leafhoppers.

"Leafhopper Stopper®" conveys the understanding of stopping leafhopper problems, which it does within the population nature of alfalfa varieties. Perhaps the biggest misconception is that ratings for alfalfa mean the same as those used for corn and beans. An alfalfa variety is a population of similar but not identical plants that are characterized by the expression of different traits, which means there are no bags of alfalfa, including 5347LH, which have 100 percent expression of any trait.

There is a lack of understanding of the differences between hybrids, varieties, and population varieties and the varying levels of trait expression in each of these from one generation to the next. An alfalfa variety is a population of plants that is characterized by percent expression of pest resistant traits. There are no bags of any alfalfa variety that have seed with 100 percent resistance to any disease or pest, including leafhoppers. The industry standard for rating levels of pest resistance (which is also used by Pioneer) shows the number of plants proven to be resistant, based on standard tests.

Variety 5347LH was introduced to the Pioneer product lineup at the same time as corn with European corn borer resistance and soybeans with the Roundup Ready gene. Descriptions of pest resistance for these major products seemed to also bring similar expectations for the leafhopper resistant alfalfa. With Bt resistance in corn it is understood that no spraying is necessary for complete control. This is not the same in reference to the term "resistance" when used for alfalfa. The term tolerance used by other crops, would possibly be more fitting for understanding the standard terms used for describing alfalfa pest resistance levels. However, tolerance is not used as a standard term in the alfalfa industry.

Under the extremely heavy leafhopper infestation in 1997, dramatic visual differences were seen between sprayed and non-sprayed research plots of 5347LH. The same was true of nonsprayed plots where 5347LH clearly was superior in green foliage and forage yield, compared to non-resistant varieties.

Variety 5347LH was initially tested and rated by Pioneer alfalfa researchers as having 57 percent resistant plants. Using the industry standards for rating varieties, this variety qualified as highly resistant (HR) to leafhoppers. With a refinement of the standard test for this trait, 5347LH is now rated as having approximately 40 percent resistant plants, placing it in the resistant (R) category. This is equal to or above any competitive varieties currently in the market place. In addition, there typically are many plants in this population with partial resistance that are not included for determination of the resistance rating.

Pioneer introduced the first leafhopper resistant variety into the marketplace. Conservative calculations were made over the life of the stand on the expected advantage of growing a resistant alfalfa, versus a non-resistant variety. Even under the severe leafhopper infestations of 1997, data is showing most places up to one half ton yield advantage from 5347LH over unsprayed non-resistant varieties: Assume $90/ton hay, one half ton per acre yield advantage per year from a leafhopper resistant variety, one bag of seed plants three acres, and a stand life of three years. The calculation would be $90 x 0.5 x 3 x 3 = $405/bag advantage from a leafhopper resistant variety.

Novartis Seeds Sports New Look

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — For almost 50 years, farmers planting hybrid corn have opened seed bags and poured red color-treated kernels into their planters. Seed suppliers used the red seed treatment to remind farmers that the kernels were treated with Captan, a fungicide.

Now that is all about to change. Next spring when farmers tear open corn seed bags from Novartis Seeds, Inc. Field Crops, they will find the kernels treated with a fashionable blue color.

The company is replacing Captan with Maxim ® AP, a new fungicide. To distinguish NK ® Brand seed and the new fungicide from the rest of the seed industry, the company is dyeing its seed corn blue.

According to Mark Wall, director of quality assurance for Novartis Seeds, the blue color reminds farmers that the kernels have received a fungicidal treatment and should not be fed to animals or humans.

The seed treatment change is more than a fashion statement. The new fungicide protects the seed from a broad spectrum of seed-borne and soil-borne diseases that can keep kernels from germinating.

"With Maxim AP, growers will notice less dust from the seed as compared to Captan," Wall said. "Fludioxnil, the active ingredient in Maxim, allows an application rate that's many times lower than Captan."

As a result, the Maxim treatment reduces growers' exposure to the fungicide for improved worker safety and lowers pesticide levels in the environment.

But why blue seed? "With our unique product lineup of insect-protected corn hybrids, and out standing genetics available in traditional hybrids, we feel our seed deserves its own color, said Jack Bernens, director, product management and development. "The blue color is the Novartis Seeds look for the future."

For the 1998 planting season, Novartis Seeds plans to use the blue, Maxim treatment on nearly all its corn seed. However, until the company depletes its supplies, some NK corn hybrids will be sold with Captan fungicide.

Gehl Announces Agreement To Acquire Mustang Manufacturing

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl Company (NASDAQ:GEHL) announced that it has signed a definitive agreement to acquire Mustang Manufacturing Company, Inc., a manufacturer of skid loaders.

The agreement specifies a purchase price of $28 million and requires approval by the shareholders of Brunel Holdings, plc, the parent company of Mustang.

William D. Gehl, chairman, president and CEO of Gehl Company, commented, "Gehl's goal is to be a major competitor in the light construction equipment market. The acquisition of Mustang gives Gehl an even stronger presence in one of the fastest growing segments of the construction equipment industry." U.S. sales of skid loaders increased from 22,000 units in 1991 to over 42,000 units in 1996.

The Mustang skid loader product will continue to be marketed under its brand name through its established distribution with manufacturing operations continuing at the Mustang facility in Owatonna, Minn. where approximately 290 people are employed.

Pennsylvanian Heads National Agricultural Bankers Group

WASHINGTON, DC — Darvin E. Boyd, senior vice president and director of the agri-finance department for CoreStates Bank, is the 1997-98 chairman of the American Bankers Association Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee. He is the first Pennsylvanian in 45 years to hold this post. In this position, he also serves as chairman of the ABA National Agricultural Bankers Conference, Nov. 9-12, in Milwaukee.

The ABA Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee focuses on meeting bankers' needs through an array of products and programs, including texts and manuals, a journal of agricultural lending and an annual conference.

One of Boyd's top priorities as chairman is to help bankers take charge of issues related to the profitability of banks that serve agriculture and rural America. "The agriculture industry is constantly changing due to technology," Boyd said. "The business philosophy of 'business as usual' doesn't work anymore. The new philosophy, 'taking charge of change' is one that agricultural lenders should seize."

Boyd is a native Pennsylvanian. He's lived in Lancaster County most of his life and currently resides in Akron. He holds a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Delaware Valley College, Doylestown, Pa., and a master's degree in public administration from Pennsylvania State University, University Park, Pa.

He joined CoreStates in 1976. He manages 19 staff and $450 million in loan commitments and $300 million in loan outstandings. CoreStates is the leading commercial bank lending to agriculture in Pennsylvania and ranks first in the northeast and eleventh in the nation. Prior to joining CoreStates, he held staff positions for the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and the General Assembly. He also served as a 4-H program director for the American-Korean Foundation in the Republic of Korea.

Boyd is chairperson of the Lancaster County Human Relations Commission, an appointed member by the Governor to the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Land Preservation Board, an honorary trustee of the Lancaster Farmland Trust Board of Trustees, and a member of the Brethren Village Board of Directors and the Elizabethtown College Church of the Brethren mutual expectations committee. He serves as moderator of the Ephrata Church of the Brethren.

The ABA Agricultural and Rural Bankers Committee has been active in finding ways for rural banks to locate new sources of lendable funds for rural economic development and streamline the lending process for guaranteed loans for farmers and ranchers in partnership with the United States Department of Agriculture. The Committee consists of 12 ABA member bank representatives plus a liaison member form the ABA State Association Division.

The ABA brings together all categories of banking institutions to best represent the interests of this rapidly changing industry. Its membership — which includes community, regional and money center banks and holding companies, as well as savings associations, trust companies and savings banks — makes ABA the largest banking trade association in the country.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

MAXI-TECH EXT GETS THE CREDIT

One of the favorite cows at E&J Meadows farm is the Judy cow that has an individual record of 33,938m 1,076f 1,006p. At the halter is Ray Wolfe, with Kathy Wolfe, Ernest Wolfe, and Stan McKee, Purina dairy specialist representing Ritters Feeds at Paxtonville.

For the Ernest and Jennie Wolfe family, Milton, their E&J Meadows farm located along Rt. 147 at the Lewisburg exit in Northumberland County has become a way of life. Ernest's parents purchased the farm in 1941. The current family members took over the place in 1967.

Along the way, a new barn was built after a fire in the 1960s and also new silos came along later. Today, along with children Ray and Dawn, Dean, Kathy, and grandchildren Randy and Deanna, the Wolfes farm 400 acres and milk 74 cows with a rolling herd average of more than 25,000 pounds of milk. They also have 50 head of replacements.

The Wolfe family practices good herd management by keeping the cows comfortable with tunnel ventilation and rubber mats on the stalls. But Purina's Maxi-Tech EXT still gets the credit for the large increase in production over the last several years.

Since the new high protein Maxi-Tech EXT feed has been introduced to the herd, DHIA records show the production levels going up from 19,000 pounds just two years ago. Individual records go up to 40,000 pounds of milk per lactation and 159 pounds of milk per day. This summer, a large group of first calf heifers came fresh and 80 percent of them milked more than 100 pounds of milk per day.

"I have never seen first-calf heifers milk like this," Ray said. "Purina is the only feed that works for us. We also have less breeding problems and better herd health. Purina provides the feed ration formulas and does a lot of free forage testing as part of their service. And their representatives really know what farming is all about. We can certainly recommend Purina to other farmers because it works for us."

Producer: Get Hay Off Field, Wrapped Quickly

ANDY ANDREWS

GERMANSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — Great baleage starts with getting hay bales off the field and wrapping them at appropriate moisture levels as soon as possible, according to a large-scale hay producer.

David Fink, owner of Heidel Hollow Farm in Germansville, often goes to great lengths to ensure bale quality and consistency — factors vital to marketing any agricultural product, especially haylage, crucial to many feed suppliers and users.

Fink recently spoke to Lancaster Farming about some of the new techniques he uses on his farm to manage and bale hay.

Fink has been a member of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council for more than 20 years. He is a 1973 graduate of Delaware Valley College in animal husbandry.

Fink, who also serves on the International Market Development Committee for the National Hay Association, manages 900 acres, all tillable, on the Lehigh Valley farm. Of the 900, 600 acres are in hay, including some alfalfa, mixed hay, and timothy.

Each year, Fink noted, the farm can achieve about three cuttings of mixed hay and about four cuttings of alfalfa. Per year, Heidel Hollow harvests 1,900 acres of hay.

Although Fink makes use of several brands of alfalfa seed, 40 percent of what he plants is Dekalb. New this year to the farm is about 30 acres of oatlage interseeded with alfalfa.

After about five years, Fink noted that alfalfa fields are rotated into Roundup Ready soybeans, double-cropped. The remaining 200 acres are in corn, all of which is fed to the hens.

Heidel Hollow is home to 20,000 hens, producing about five million eggs per year. Those table eggs are packaged on site and are marketed directly to area stores and restaurants.

Waste Water Rich In Corn-Growing Nutrients

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Participants at a rotational pasture management field day learned about a win-win situation at Plum Bottom Farm near Belleville and momentarily forgot about low milk prices and less than optimal corn yields.

The event featured long-term sustainable pasture production in an intensive grazing system and was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), Fairmont Foods, Mifflin County Cooperative Extension, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, Golden and Associates and Plum Bottom Farm, an Ayrshire farm owned by John Rodgers.

The win-win situation? Irrigating pastures with biologically-friendly waste water, or sludge, from Fairmont Foods, a nearby food processing plant.

"The challenge for Fairmont Foods is how to dispose of its manufacturing by-products. The challenge for farmers is how to provide extrra water to crops when liquid from the sky is limited," said Dave Filson, Miffliin County's extension director, as he addressed the crowd. "These challenges become opportunities when environmentally sound waste water becomes a nutrient utilized by plants for growth."

Filson said the same opportunity exists with other food manufacturers. For example, farmers can work potato peels from a Mifflin County potato chip manufacturer into soil deficient in organic matter. The fully organic, nontoxic potato by-product can help build the tilth of the soil, once again providing an opportunity for both the manufacturer and land owner.

But the system needs one more ingredient to make it work — good management. Can the manufacturer generate the by-product on a regular basis? What if it rains continuously for a period of time? What about tire compaction on pastures? Will the farmer know the analysis per load? Will the

Also, Heidel Hollow manages about 20 acres of vegetables, 17 of which are in sweet corn, managed by David's son, Mike. Mike also grows cabbage, beans, and about 1½ acres of plasticulture strawberries. Another son, Travis, helps bale the hay. There are 10 full-time workers in all on the farm.

David Fink, along with wife Sonia, manager of the poultry operation, purchased the farm about two years ago from David's father, Orrin. They bale different types of hay, but so far, "no big square bales," he indicated. About 60 percent are small square bales and 40 percent are round. All baleage is plastic-wrapped. They also double-compress small square bales.

Of particular importance to the farm is the use of drying techniques crucial to bringing the moisture of the square bales down to 15 percent to prevent mold growth, Fink noted. After cutting, the hay is placed in windrows, baled, and palletized.

While baling, a package accumulator is used to organize the bales in tight rows before they are palletized. There are 70 bales per pallet. The bales are conveyed to three drying stations — two of which are fuel-oil fired and one uses forced ambient air.

'We are one of the few producer-processor-marketers remaining in the country,' Fink said.

Depending on the moisture of the hay, outside temperatures, and other conditions, drying can take from 48 hours to seven days, he noted. However, using heating oil can be very expensive, said Fink.

Drier capacity stands at 75 tons per cycle, or about 2,500 bales.

Even with the drying, however, the farm uses preservatives "on almost all hay," said Fink. Those preservatives include buffered propionic acid and a drying agent, potassium carbonate, sprayed on at cutting.

"We do a lot of testing," said Fink. All baleage and half of the dry hay get analyzed. "Every lot gets tested. All baleage is tested for moisture, which helps determine price." This factor is the "hay equivalent price," Fink said.

For the oatlage, protein levels are running 11 percent. For the alfalfa, protein is more than 22 percent. Total digestible nutrients run more than 60 for the alfalfa. Relative feed value ranges from 100-158 for some samples. Net Energy per Lactation, or NELs, are in the low 60s.

Sometimes, customer demand skyrockets — on one day alone, Fink remembers harvesting 120 tons.

In the future, Fink wants to be prepared to harvest more baleage at a time and to increase the baleage capacity by 1,000 tons.

Fink stores the hay in one 500-ton capacity barn, and two 600-ton capacity barns, all with a total capacity in excess of 28,000 square feet.

Fink sells half of what he produces directly to customers and half to brokers. Customers include direct feed companies and dairies.

With the National Hay Association, through the international marketing committee, more hay than ever before is being shipped overseas, particularly to Japan. Japan uses the most tonnage of hay, "in the millions," Fink said. Two years ago Fink went on a trip to Morocco to develop markets for U.S. hay.

The group is actively trying to reach South Korea hay markets, which has "really taken off" in the past five years, Fink noted. During the last three years, hay is gradually being marketed in Mexico.

Meanwhile, the farm finished construction in the spring of 1996 on a 600-ton facility measuring 80-feet by 136-feet. There will be more storage capacity for the double-compressed square bales.

Recently, David's son Travis, using a skid-steer loader equipped with a bale rack, was loading an eight and a half ton partial load of compressed bales for an oversees market.

David Fink recently noted some information from the recent 102nd annual meeting of the National Hay Association, which took place in Sun Valley, Idaho. He noted that genetic engineering will be impacting the alfalfa industry in the near future. Also, big square bales and balage are the bright spots in the hay tool industry.

With good communication and a "Plan", farmers and processing plants both can win. In this situation, Fairmont Foods in Belleville does produce sludge on a regular basis. To prevent hydrologic loading, or excess water on the soil for an extended period of time, Rodgers allows Fairmont to store sludge in his liquid manure tanks at Plum Bottom.

Fairmount Foods buys raw milk from 183 dairy farmers — 100 in Mifflin County, 65 in Huntingdon County, and 18 in western Centre County. The Belleville plant makes ice cream mix, cottage cheese, French onion dip, sour cream and other dairy products. After creating these dairy delights, Fairmont scrubs down the equipment. The clearest water goes to the Water Authority. Hog farmers pick up the whey. What's left is sludge - a water and sediment mixture.

"We needed an outlet for the sludge," said Susan Geringer, plant manager at Fairmont Foods. "It's nice that the farmers who produce the raw milk can benefit from the sludge."

As for nutrients, Geringer said the sludge is high in phosphorus, has medium levels of potassium, low levels of nitrogen, and is neutral (pH of 7.4). Yes it has minute amounts of detergent — detergent that is distilled, regulated, and neutralized.

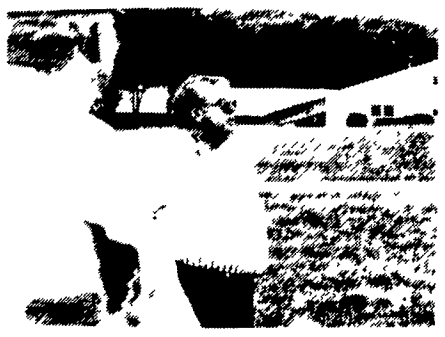
Rodgers spreads approximately one to three loads of sludge a year or a rate from the truck of 15,000 gallons per acre. In practical terms, that's about a half inch of rain. The sludge truck follows Rodgers' Ayrshire herd through the rotation — as the cattle are moved out of a pasture, the truck pulls in. The cattle enter that same pasture five weeks later.

In one pasture, John Rodgers seeded the European legume bird's-foot trefoil and timothy 40 years ago. Over time, the pasture mix has slowly disappeared as bluegrass has taken over. The 40-acre pasture, in rotational grazing for the past five years, has received minimal off-farm inputs except for the sludge, and supports 17 to 19 heifers at a time.

"The nice thing about rotational grazing," said Rodgers, "is the tremendous contribution to feed — and there's no cost in harvesting!"

In a field walk, Penn State Forage Specialist Marvin Hall reveiwed each of six rotational pastures. He discussed the health of each pasture and plant species such as white clover, bluegrass, and bird's-foot/timothy mix.

In the last pasture, Sonny Golden, a grazing consultant and nutritionist from Springville, Susquehanna County, encouraged farmers to see pastures as a multiple source of nutrients for animal, including protein, fat, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins. Golden said the nutritional make-up of each pasture varies spring through fall.



Sonny Golden, a nutritionist at Golden and Associates in Susquehanna County, talks about seeing pastures as a multiple source of nutrients for animals.

Penn State's Forage Specialist Marvin Hall leads a tour into the pastures to see first-hand each pasture's health and the various types of plant species.

Tips On How To Select An Alfalfa Variety

Dr. Marvin Hall
Penn State
Forage Extension Specialist

It is that time of year again when alfalfa seed is generally purchased for seeding next spring. However, the choice of which variety "is best" for a particular farm is not that easy!

In the past 10 years, more than 150 alfalfa varieties or experimental lines have been evaluated by Penn State University in research trials at three locations in Pennsylvania. A large number of varieties for which adequate data are available have performed satisfactorily in these research trials.

The results of these variety evaluation trials appear in the Forage Trials Report. The 1998 edition of this annual publication will be available at county offies of Penn State Cooperative Extension before Jan. 1.

With all of these varieties available, how can the "best" variety by selected? First of all, there is no "best" variety for all situations. In fact, there probably is not one "best" variety for a single Pennsylvania farm because of the extreme variability in soils across the state.

The key to selecting varieties is to identify the two or three varieties that are best suited for a particular situation. The following steps may help identify those suitable varieties.

1. Select varieties that have adequate resistance to the diseases prevalent in your area, on your farm, on in the exact field where the alfalfa will be planted.

2. From these varieties, select those that have persisted well in environments or situations similar to the farm where they will be planted. This information is given in the Penn State Forage Trails Report.

3 From the list of varieties that you have identified as acceptable, select the highest yielding varieties. This can be done by selecting the highest yielding variety at one location over several years or by selecting the varieties that were among the highest yielding at all locations for several years. The first method will provide a small list of varieties that yield well under a narrower range of conditions, while the second method provides a limited list of varieties that yield well under a wider range of conditions.

4. From the list, select 2 or 3 varieties to plant and "test" in the fie4ld.

The varieties selected in this manner, when properly fertilized and managed, will be the highest yielding available and normally persist for three or more years. By planting a couple varieties, you are testing the "best" varieties to see which is truly best on your farm or in a particular field. This information should help when selecting an alfalfa variety in the future. Avoid use of nonadapted common seedlots when growing alfalfa as a perennial forage crop in Pennsylvania.

A limited number of alfalfa varieties have the potential or producing secondary roots and have a spreading growth habit. These varieties are referred to as "creeping" alfalfas. However, in a humid climate such as Pennsylvania, these varieties have shown growth habits simiar to our more typical bunch-type alfalfas and have shown no yield advantage. Multileaf varieties, those varieties developed to have more than three leaflets per leaf, have recently been marketed throughout Pennsylvania. Unfortunately, thse varieties have not consistently shown improved quality or yield over traditional varieties. Once again, select varieties based on disease resistance, winter hardiness, and yield, not because they are multileafs.

Mayne's grazing research with dairy cattle and beef is some of the strongest in the world. Sinclair Mayne's research has emphasized improving grazing management to increase intake and utilization of pasture. In addition, he has been involved in a long-term study to evaluate the optimum genetic merit of different cow breeds for grazing management systems.

Sinclair has been an invited speaker at many producer and scientific meetings throughout the world. He most recently was an invited speaker at the International Grassland Congress in Canada. His many travels and his experiences in grazing provides him with a broad understanding of grazing systems.

In addition to the educational program, there will be a trade show and company representatives available to showcase the latest in grazing technology. If it is New Zealand-style milking facilities, fence insulators, or the newest plant species for pasture that you are interested in, you can learn all about it at the trade show.

Grazing Cattle? Keep Management Flexible

Grace Truman
Extension Specialist
West Virginia University
Extension Service

Grazing management over the year must be flexible to obtain the optimum level of pasture utilization.

Dr. Edward B. Rayburn, extension forage agronomist at West Virginia University, notes that the rate of forage growth varies over the year. It is fast in the spring and slow during dry or cold periods.

On average, 50 percent of perennial cool-season forage growth occurs from April to June, 33 percent in July and August, and just 16 percent from September to November.

"To account for this, you'll need more acres for grazing an animal in the summer and fall than in the spring," said Rayburn. "You can do this by making more hay on some fields in the spring and allowing more acres to be grazed later by reducing the number of animals in the herd or by wasting feed and clipping weeds and seed weeds."

When using rotational grazing in the spring, move grazing cattle to the next paddock when the growth is tall enough. Don't try to get the very last bit of forage in the field.

Rayburn said there is merit in using continuous grazing in the spring to help hold back the spring flush. As pasture growth slows, use a more intense rotation.

"Graze cattle to optimize forage utilization," he said. "In the fall, make sure you move cattle off paddocks when the paddocks reach the desired stubble height — and keep the animals out. This will reduce cattle weight loss in the fall, reduce soil erosion and loss of expensive fertilizer and lime, and ensure good pasture growth the next year."

Directory to List Forage Producers

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The continued dry conditions this growing season could leave area dairy and livestock producers with short feed supplies.

In an effort to provide forage producer contacts to anyone interested in purchasing hay, straw or silage, Lehigh County Cooperative Extension is producing an updated Southeastern Pennsylvania Forage Directory for distribution this fall. The directory will list forage producers with supplies for sale from the entire eight-county region.

The revised directory has two functions. In addition to allowing the forage consumer easy access to available regional supplies, the increased marketing opportunities for the forage producer is well documented. Total acres harvested for hay make it the number one field crop in the commonwealth. This ranking is due to Pennsylvania's ideal forage growing conditions and the vital need for this feedstuff by the states livestock. The 170,000 head of cattle, 27,000 horses and 11,000 sheep in the southeastern region of Pennsylvania rely on forage as a major part of their diet.

In preparation for the release of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Forage Directory, Lehigh County Cooperative Extension is updating its mailing list. Any forage producers interested in being placed in the directory and any forage consumers interested in receiving the directory should contact their local Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Fall Fertilization Of Forage Crops

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — The question of fall fertilization of forage crops is most often related to concerns about winter survival of perennial forages.

While fall fertilization can have an impact on winter survival there are many other factors that influence winter survival, including the overall nutritional management of the crop, harvest practices throughout the year, weather conditions, and varieties just to name a few.

The following is a focus only on the nutritional factors.

For new seedings the key to winter survival is to have a healthy, well established plant going into the first winter. Having soil test levels at least in the optimum range for pH, phosphorus, and potassium before establishment is critical. While all of these fertility factors are important, it has been shown that good levels of phosphorus will promote vigorous root growth in the new seeding. A larger, more well established root system will be more resistant to heaving, which is a major cause of winter stand loss, especially in new seedings. A fall application of fertilizer to a new seeding cannot make up for the lack of good fertility at planting and resulting small root system.

Once a forage crop is established, the fertility program should focus on maintenance of good fertility levels in the soil for the life of the forage stand. The most important part of the maintenance program is regular soil testing to determine the need for lime, phosphorus, or potassium to replace the large amount of nutrients removed in the forage. On grasses nitrogen will also be an important part of the maintenance fertility program. For legumes and grasses, potassium seems to be the most critical nutrient for winter survival. Potassium, being a salt, lowers the freezing point of cells just like applying salt to a road lowers the temperature where the water on the road will freeze. Also, potassium influences the levels of soluble sugars in the cell sap. These sugars act as an antifreeze in the plant cells enabling them to withstand lower temperatures without freeziung.

The timing of phosphorus and potassium applications for foragesa will depend on the situation. When the soil test levels are in the optimum range and the recommendations are low, the timing of fertilizer application is not critical. These low recommendations on an optimum testing soil are only to replace what the crop will remove so that the test level is still in the optimum range going into the following eason. Fertilizer can be applied after one of the cuttings or in the fall. There will be no advantage to splitting the fertilizer application in this situation. Given a choice betwen applying the fertilizer during the season or in the fall, fall application may provide a very slight insurance effect, but this is not a major consideration.

Where high rates of fertilizer are recommended there may be an advantage to splitting the application some after first cutting and the balance in the fall. Many plants will take up potassium whether they need it or not. This is called luxury consumption. If all of the fertilizer is applied at one time, the next cutting may take up more than it needs leaving the crop short later on. By splitting the applications the efficiency of potassium use will be improved because there will be less luxury consumption. Also, as noted before, if the soil test levels are low enough to result in a large recommenation, particularly for potassium, applying some of the fertilizer in the fall before the plants are dormant may improve winter survival.

On forage grasses nitrogen is another consideration. Nitrogen should be applied to grasses in the spring and after each cutting, except the last cutting in the fall. The rate should be based on the expected yield of the following cutting. Applying nitrogen in the fall for use by the crop the following spring is not recommended. Another important consideration for nitrogen fertilization of grasses is the balance between nitrogen and potassium. Nitrogen applied in the fall on soils with low potassium levels can increase winter kill of grasses over where no fertilizer is applied. Thus, soil tsting and applying a balanced fertility program is important.

There are no special considerations for nutrient sources used for fall fertilization of forages. All of the standard fertilizer materials are acceptable. Manure is also a source of nutrients. The phosphorus and potassium in manure can be considered equivalent to fertilizer phosphorus and potassium in their efect for building soil fertility. The availability of nitrogen will range form 20 to 50% depending on how soon after application it is soaked into the soil by rainfall. The sooner it gets rain the better. Manure is not generally recommended for legumes because the nitrogen in the manure is wasted and ther is the potential for some adverse effects from manure application to legumes. If manure must be applied to a legume, fall is probably the best time to apply it to minimize the potential negative effects.

While having good fertility levels for a forage crop in the fall is critical for optimum produciton, fall fertilization is only one part of the management system to achieve this. Optimum soil test levels should be established prior to seeding and a maintenance fertilization program based on regular soil testing are the foundation of good nutrient management of forages.

Rodgers Leads Conference

ARDMORE, Okla. — John Rodgers, a member of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council from Bellville, Pa., and a past president of the American Forage and Grassland Council, was the leader of a Leadership Retreat at a conference held here at the Noble Foundation in August.

The conference was planned for representatives of the affiliate councils of the American Forage and Grassland Council. Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council is one of more than 30 councils in the United States and Canada. Members of PFGC are automatically members of AFGC. Members receive the publication Forage Leader four times a year from AFGC. Richard Hann, executive director of PFGC attended the conference.

Rodgers facilitated the conference with two main goals: to help affiliate councils catch a vision of what could be done at the local level through their own leadership, and to see how improved cooperation between the affiliates and AFGC can generate a product that will be better than either one can do alone.

This was the first opportunity for the affiliate council representatives to get together and share ideas and successes that can help other affiliates from "old" as well as newly formed councils.

Jimmy Henning, extension forage specialist, University of Kentucky, president-elect of AFGC.

Dick Kauffman

This has been a challenging year for forage producers in Pennsylvania. The drought has had a significant impact on forage production.

Grass pastures and grass hayfields were impacted more than legumes, however, even alfalfa, with its deep taproot, was unable to sustain normal yields.

In our alfalfa trials in Lancaster County, yields were down 20 percent from 1996.

Insect pressure on alfalfa fields was extreme this year. The potato leafhopper population exploded, and insecticide treatments, in many cases, did not provide full cutting protection. Even the new "leafhopper resistant" alfalfa varieties were damaged by the leafhopper.

While hay yields are down this year, the forage quality of the hay appears to be very good. Therefore, animal performance ought to be optimal.

It's a good time to plan on attending the 1997 Quality Forages Conference on Nov. 18 at Tunkhannock.

John Rodgers, dairyman and forage producer, Plum Bottom Farms, Belleville, Pa., past president of AFGC.

Past Season Drought Challenges Met By Graziers

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Graziers need to set aside some space to be used as a sacrifice area during a drought in order not to permanently damage pasture stands, according to several who spoke in August during Ag Progress Days.

According to Tom Calvert, formerly with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and a sheep producer from Greene County, producers need to ensure that plants are not hurt by overly grazing them, especially during a drought.

Calvert spoke on a panel with two other producers and an NRCS grassland management specialist at a graziers workshop next to the conservation resources technology tent during Ag Progress Days.

According to Duane E. Pysher, grassland management specialist with NRCS and moderator of the panel, some growers believe that a plant stores its carbohydrate energies in the root system. That's simply not true. Actually, the "storage reserves are above ground," noted Pysher. If the plant is too heavily grazed and is under stress (by cold or drought), very little energy is stored.

Overgrazing late in the season or during drought can readily hurt stands and impede plant growth the following season.

During drought, producers must maintain supplemental feed and change stocking rates accordingly, noted Larry Lohr, dairyman from Somerset County. That's where a combination of supplemental feed and a total mixed ration (TMR) system can be most helpful — and provide the flexibility needed when pasturing is not available.

During the season, producers were hit hard all over the state by the fourth drought in seven years. The state declared a drought watch in several counties, particularly those in the southeastern part of Pennsylvania.

Woody Zook, beef producer from Chester County, used his experience from droughts in the late 1980s. He learned to maintain a sacrifice area and feed supplemental hay for a two-week period of time.

This year, like the droughts of the late 1980s, graziers were challenged with coming up with alternative ways to provide feed for cattle.

Lohr has been involved with intensive grazing systems on his farm for 12 years. He said he was reluctant to try out grazing on his farm, and went in with the expectation, he noted, that it wouldn't work.

At the time he was managing 40 cows. Where he expected the transition from conventional dairying to grass-based to take six months or more, he found it could be done readily — within six weeks. Now, Lohr milks 90-100 cows (with replacements, about a total of 150-200 head) on paddock sizes ranging from 1.1 to 1.5 acres. Overall, Lohr maintains 350-400 acres of land, including rented acreage.

Since the transition, he has saved money by grazing cows and seen health improvements for the herd. Lohr sees "a lot better situation with the feet and leg health . . . so many advantages to it you can't even count them all."

One challenge he faced was coming up with enough water for his cattle. He advised producers to select a large enough line with a big enough flow to the paddocks.

Tom Calvert, a sheep producer from Greene County, said he has been "with sheep forever — born there, married there, lived on wife's home farm. Sheep have been my life."

Calvert maintains 65-120 ewes on 13 primary acres of intensively grazed pasture. Grazing has allowed him to lamb on pasture, benefitting health of the sheep overall.

Woody Zook, another panel member and a Chester County freezer beef producer, said that in 1980 he purchased the family farm and wanted to find some way to farm part-time. Zook began with an intensive grazing program that he has continued to this day. Now he maintains 32 acres in permanent pasture. He cares for 30 brood cows and 30 calves. Seven of the 32 acres are in some form of warm season grass.

Zook said, "we manage the grasses — the cattle do the grazing." The only equipment Zook uses are a tractor, mower, and a grain elevator.

Much of Zook's business involves direct marketing of the freezer beef.

"I have not found any drawbacks to intensive grazing at all," Zook said. "It's a management tool, and we're still going through the learning curve."

Lohr, dairyman from Somerset County, uses a lot of different varieties and species on the pastures. The pastures are made up of 60 percent legumes and 40 percent grasses.

Zook uses different clovers and a bird's-foot trefoil/fescue combination. He also uses a clover variety called Southern Cross, a New Zealand red-type clover.

Lohr noted it is important to try varieties on small plots to see how they'll work on the farm. "Try experiments on your own farm and see what works for you, because it doesn't work everywhere," he said.

Zook said that any grazing system has to have flexibility in it. "You often don't know what plants will do and how fast they'll rebud," he said, so it's important to build a plan for times of drought.

Also, Zook noted that he clips a lot of his chicory pastures. He clips a seven-acre field twice a year.

Calvert, sheep producer from Greene County, clips when he can get a chance to take care of weedy areas and for reseeding.

Now May Be A Good Time To 'Brush Up' On Pasture Terminology

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Extension Forage Specialist
Penn State

Learning the "language of pasture" is a prerequisite to learning about and improving pasture management skills.

Pasture forage is described as herbage or the above-ground plant material of grasses, legumes, weeds, and shrubs. Herbage mass is the total amount of herbage per unit area measured to ground level.

Herbage mass is expressed in terms of pounds of dry matter per acre (lbs DM/a). A pasture sward is comprised of all the plants in the pasture. Livestock are unable to consume all of the herbage present because the jaw, teeth and tongue actions during grazing physically restrict how closely the animal can graze to ground level.

In addition, the animal is able to selectively graze within the sward, and less palatable plants or parts of plants may be avoided. Selectivity is dependent on grazing pressure which defines the rate of disappearance of herbage material. Under lax grazing pressure there is a slow decline in herbage mass and animals are able to exercise a high degree of selectivity. If high grazing pressure is applied, selectivity is reduced.

Both grazing pressure and the residual amount of herbage that remains after grazing (post-grazing herbage mass, or residual herbage mass (lb DM/a)), can be controlled by the farmer. In general, as residual herbage mass (often termed residual dry matter on RDM) is lowered per animal, intake of herbage is reduced and, in the absence of supplements, animal performance is. lower.

Many grazing management guidelines describe the relationship between minimum RDM and livestock productivity. Sward surface height (SSH), which is an alternative method for defining grazing management, is the average height of green leaves in the sward canopy. As SSH decreases, animal intake decreases.

Successful pasture managers are familiar with these relationships and use this information when making decisions to shift animals between paddocks. The herbage available (lb DM/head/day) for grazing refers to the difference between the total amount of herbage present (i.e. herbage mass) and the amount of herbage left after grazing (i.e. the RDM). Herbage available should not be confused with the term herbage allowance, which defines the amount of herbage per animal to ground level on a daily basis (i.e. lb DM/hd/d).

Herbage allowance values include the post-grazing residual herbage and are always greater than the herbage available to livestock. Multiplying the herbage available by the area to be grazed yields the total amount of herbage available per paddock; dividing the herbage available by the number of animals provides the amount of herbage available per animal (normally this is in terms of lb DM/hd/d).

There are numerous terms used to describe grazing management or the manner in which a farmer controls the grazing of livestock to achieve specific production goals. Controlled grazing occurs when grazing is regulated to achieve a desired result.

Intensive grazing attempts to maximize the productivity of animals and pastures through increased capital inputs (fencing, fertilizer, water, seed) and management. This contrasts with extensive grazing where a low level of inputs and usually a large area of land per animal. The animals graze the designated area throughout the time period when grazing is allowed. The pastures receive no rest (leaving an area ungrazed or unharvested for a length of time) from grazing.

Under intermittent grazing, pastures are grazed for indefinite periods at specified or irregular intervals. Rotational, strip, sequence, mob, short duration, and creep grazing are all forms of intermittent grazing.

Set stocking, or the practice of allowing a fixed number of animals on an area of land for the entire grazing period, is a form of continuous grazing management. The number of animals on a grazing area for a specified period of time is the stocking rate.

There are a lot more terms related to pastures and their uses, but we have discussed most of the ones that you will encounter. The main purpose of becoming familiar with terminology is that it helps communication.

Scientific papers, conference presentations, news articles, workshop courses, and advice from consultants can be interpreted and applied much more readily if you understand the "language."

You May Be Able To Double Benefits By Mowing

Geraldine Kessel
Extension Specialist
West Virginia University
Extension Service

You can double your benefits by mowing weedy pastures.

One benefit is that mowing prevents or slows down seed production of weeds. The second benefit is that mowing removes seed heads so the pastures can produce new, tender regrowth.

Weeds rob water and nutrients needed by pasture plants. They also shade the other plants and slow their growth. Some weeds, such as thistles, prevent cattle from grazing large areas because of their spiny leaves.

If possible, graze a pasture heavily just before mowing to use all the feed available. This is especially true with beef cattle. In many cases the animals will eat some of the weeds and tall grasses that would be wasted.

Mow pastures closely. Cutting to a height of 2 to 3 inches will remove the mature growth. This cutting management helps keep clover in pastures and promotes fast growth. If you're concerned that dry weather will prevent regrowth, mow only a third to a half of your pastures every 10 days to two weeks.

Where possible, save excess spring and summer growth for hay. Some farmers get enough hay from pasture mowing to feed their cows all winter. By doing this, you can use all the forage you produce for grazing or hay.

Could A Killer Be Hiding In Your Hay?

WOOSTER, Ohio — A little black bug could mean death to your horses or cattle, and that bug is often present in the alfalfa field.

Ohio State University Extension's Bill Lyon says there is increasing concern over blister beetles in Ohio hay and the risks to livestock — especially horses.

Blister beetles are more common in Southern states, but recent reports of the toxic bug have been made in Michigan, Kentucky and southern Ohio.

"Blister beetles feed on the flower of blooming alfalfa plants," Lyon said. "They threaten third and fourth cutting alfalfa hay. They usually appear in late August and September."

Adult blister beetles have long, narrow bodies, usually ranging from .5 to 1.5 inches long. Several Ohio species have different color patterns — most common is the black blister beetle. The beetles emerge in late May and reach peak populations in late August. The adults lay eggs, and larvae develop in the soil, feeding on grasshopper eggs and blooms on plants.

"Increasing grasshopper populations have made blister beetles more common in this area," Lyon said.

Horses are considered most susceptible to blister beetles, although both cattle and sheep have been affected. "Blister beetles contain a natural toxin called cantharidin that can kill livestock. Cantharidin has toxicity comparable to strychnine or cyanide."

It takes about 50 beetles to kill a 550-pound horse. "It's important to know the quality of the hay you're feeding," he said. "The lethal dosage of cantharidin in a horse is one milligram cantharidin per kilogram of horse body weight."

The toxic beetle is often harvested along with the alfalfa. Depending on the type of mower or windrower, large numbers of beetles may be crushed during harvest and trapped in bales. The beetles continue to be toxic even after death.

"You really need to avoid clumps of bister beetles," Lyon said. "If you notice the black clumps when mowing hay, stop the tractor, get down, and disperse the beetles."

When a horse ingests a toxic number of blister beetles — dead or alive — it often dies within 72 hours. Specific symptoms include colic, straining, increased temperature, depression, increased heart and respiratory rates, dehydration, sweating and diarrhea. There is frequent urination, especially after the first 24 hours.

Lyon said farmers can take basic management practices and precautions against blister beetles. "Since blister beetles don't usually build up in large numbers until August, hay from the first cutting should be set aside for horse feed," he said. "Crimping and conditioning hay crushes and retains beetles that would otherwise move out of the swathed hay before baling. Harvest alfalfa in bud and very early bloom stage."

Lyon also said that since beetles are found in clusters or clumps, they may swarm in front of the harvester. "Allow the beetles to disperse or move to another section of the field for awhile. Carbaryl (Sevin) can also be used to spot treat alfalfa within one day of harvest, although it's best not to use pesticides unless a severe infestation occurs," Lyon said.

"Blister beetles aren't a huge problem, but farmers should keep in mind the dangers they may cause. The best thing to do is just be aware of the problem."

For more information on blister beetle toxicity, contact Bill Lyon, Ohio State University Extension Entomology, (6514) 292-5274.

Here Are Some Fall Grazing Tips For Beef Producers

Grace Truman
Extension Specialist
West Virginia University
Extension Service

Beef producers can delay using harvested feeds by using stockpiled fescue and crop residues in the early part of the winter feeding program.

If you're stockpiling fescue, don't let cattle graze it until late fall or early winter. Chemical changes inside the fescue plant make the grass more desirable and more nutritious at that time.

While you're stockpiling fescue, you can let cattle graze crop residues. They should start grazing residues as soon as possible after harvesting. Corn stalks, milo stubble and soybean stubble make an acceptable feed for dry, pregnant cows. Provide other feeds to younger cattle being grazed for gains above the maintenance level.

Using temporary electric fencing will help with crop residue feeding. Allow the cattle onto only a limited area of the field at a time. If you provide free access, the animals will glean the highest-quality feed in the first few days. The remaining residue will be of low quality and won't meet the animals' nutritional requirements.

Strip grazing will provide a more even-quality feed and will keep the animals from trampling as much feed.

Keep in mind that the quality of residue declines very rapidly, especially in rainy weather. So let animals graze the residues as soon as possible after harvest.

For more information on feeding beef cattle, contact your county extension service.

Farm Safety 4 Just Kids

Prior to the establishment of Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, a study by the Harborview Injury Prevention and Research Center estimated that 300 children and adolescents were dying each year from farm injuries, and that another 23,500 were suffering nonfatal trauma. An update of that study now indicates that the farm fatality rate for children and adolescents has declined by 39 percent.

With the help of Cargill Hybrid Seeds and other corporate sponsors, Farm Safety 4 Just Kids is celebrating its 10th year of advocating the prevention of farm-related childhood injuries, health risks and fatalities. Through educational programs and a large network of grassroots volunteers this nonprofit organization is leading the way to a safer future for the children of today's farming communities.

QUALITY HAY

TO PRESERVE QUA

Firm, well shaped bales of uniform size are easiest to wrap and store. Due to the nature of high moisture hay, the baler must be designed for the task. Although most conventional round balers will make silage bales, premature structural failure, plugging, and inconsistent bale density should be expected after a relatively short time. Optimum bale size is 4'x4'. Larger bales can be wrapped, but due to the extra weight, have a tendency to sag which increases the risk of splitting plastic film. Be sure to use untreated sisal, plastic or nylon twine if you intend to wrap high moisture bales. Treated sisal twine produces a chemical reaction that will burn through plastic film.

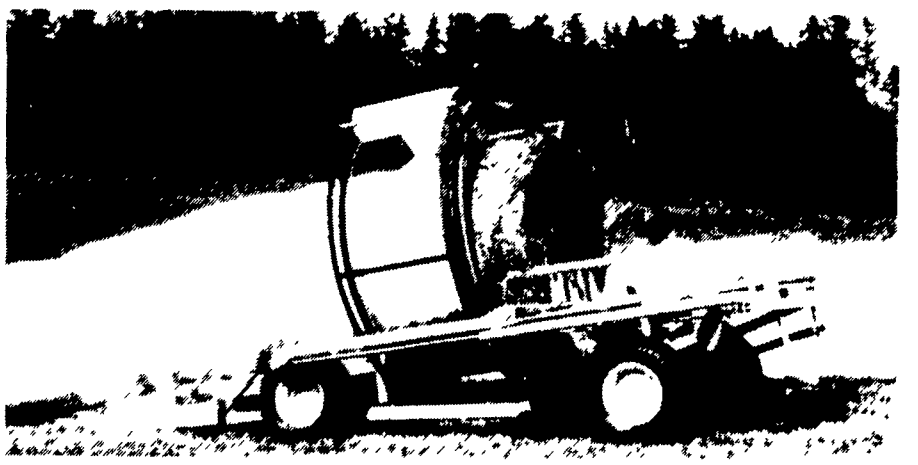
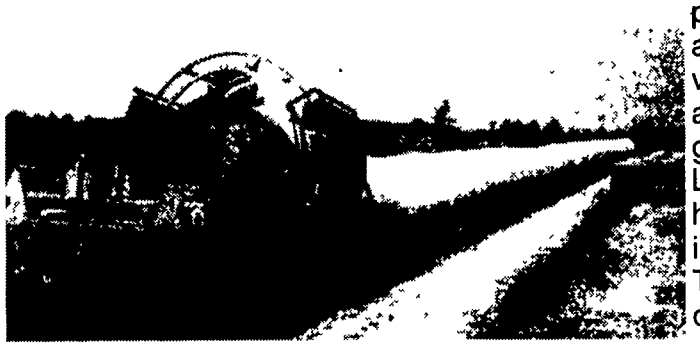
TUBE-LINE BALEWRAPPER



For optimum speed and efficiency patented Tube-Line Wrappers are the answer! Tube-Line Wrappers wrap a continuous row of bales. The airtight application of stretch wrap film retains moisture balance as haylage matures and prevents air infiltration. The shrink wrap also prevents wind damage and accommodates variation in bale size and shape without air gaps.



Long stem silage is better used in the animals digestive system. Feeding high quality haylage from wrapped bales can reduce or eliminate feeding grain while retaining or increasing weight gains or milk production.
Tube-Line wrappers for all round bales or large square bales are available in either manual or fully automatic models.

An Overview

At this time, over one-half million forage-producing acres exist in northeast Pennsylvania Since the late 1980's that acreage has decreased approximately ten percent while livestock numbers have remained comparatively constant The ability of the farmers in this region to market quality forages through livestock products will have a very large and direct influence on the economic well-being of their farms, agri-businesses, and of the greater economic community at large Because of this - forage quality is, and will continue to be, of utmost importance in northeastern Pennsylvania

Livestock farmers will not want to miss the 97 Quality Forages Conference. Participants will be able to visit with specialists, fellow producers, and local ag-service and equipment providers Indoor and outdoor exhibitors will be on hand to display their products and answer questions

...Forage quality is, and will continue to be, of utmost importance in northeastern Pennsylvania.

John Rodgers, Pennsylvania dairyman and past President of the American Forage and Grassland Council will deliver the Keynote address John is a forage producer and has traveled extensively talking about the need for quality forages

Following the keynote, participants can choose the breakout sessions of their liking The conference will be divided into two concurrent tracks The sessions are aligned in time slots so that switching from track to track is possible The complete agenda is outlined on the following foldout

Certification means that each lab came within an acceptable range of accuracy for dry matter, crude protein and ADF on three of four hay tests last year.

BOOST SILAGE MILEAGE

CHEMGRO SI2000

Making great silage and haylage isn't easy. You have to beat the weather, the natural ups and downs of good and bad crop years, mold, and spoilage. Then you have to worry about what it cost you to feed silage for the value you received.

Chemgro silage inoculants SI 2000 and SI 2000ws can eliminate a lot of the guesswork. Designed to allow you to choose dry or water applications, either products will add quality and silage mileage no matter what your crop.

You get fast-dropping ph, rapidly-rising lactic acid production, and quicker fermentation than you find in both untreated silage or crops treated with other inoculant brands.

The result is silage that is more palatable for the cows, higher in total nutrients, and that contains more total digestible dry matter - a higher return on your investment.

Call us today to find out more about Chemgro SI 2000 and SI 2000ws silage inoculants and applicators.

GRAZING ALFALFA IN PENNSYLVANIA
Penn State Agronomy Facts 42

Alfalfa grazing is not new.

Alfalfa has been grazed alone or in mixtures with grasses and other legumes since its introduction into the United States. Compared with other management systems, however, grazing alfalfa has never been a widespread practice in this country.

While alfalfa has been used extensively as a grazing crop in other countries, grazing of alfalfa in this country traditionally has been relegated to a cleanup operation in the fall.

Grazing systems to optimize alfalfa's grazing potential requires a higher level of management than do some grazing systems. In spite of this, interest in grazing alfalfa has been increasing.

Establishing Alfalfa For Grazing

Establish alfalfa for grazing just as you would if it were to be used for hay or silage by following these guidelines (refer to the Penn State Agronomy Guide for more information on alfalfa establishment):

- Plant on a well-drained soil.
- Use a soil test as a guide for rates of lime, phosphorus and potash.
- Select an adapted, high-yielding, disease and insect-resistant variety. Use certified seed to ensure seed quality and purity.
- Inoculate the seed with fresh alfalfa inoculant just before seeding. Make sure the word "alfalfa" appears on the inoculant container. For pre-inoculated seed, check the date the seed was inoculated.
- Sow into a firm seedbed. Alfalfa can successfully be sown with a cultipacker-seeder, with a seeding attachment on a cultipacker, by broadcasting or with a drill, followed by rolling. Plant no deeper than ¼ inch in heavy soil or ½ inch in light soil.
- Add lime, phosphorus, and potassium as soil tests indicate. A good time to lime and fertilize for stand maintenance is at the end of one growing season and before growth starts the next season.

Alfalfa Grazing Management

Rotational grazing is a "must" for optimum returns in an alfalfa or alfalfa-grass grazing system. Rotational grazing is more labor intensive than continuous grazing because of the need to provide and maintain electric fencing and to move animals from one paddock to another on a carefully planned and executed schedule.

Care also must be given to avoid damaging the alfalfa stand, because comparatively high numbers of animals graze on a relatively small area of alfalfa. However, the rewards can offset the extra effort.

There is no set rule on number of paddocks required or on paddock size. Most recommendations call for fields to be divided into a minimum of six to eight paddocks for most effective management. Paddock size depends on the number and size of animals being grazed. However, there should be enough animals in a paddock to harvest the available forage in less than four days.

As an example of a rotational grazing practice, a recent demonstration successfully grazing 24-beef cattle on a four-acre alfalfa plot. The field was subdivided into eight half-acre paddocks. After four days grazing on each paddock, the cattle were rotated. After all eight paddocks had been grazed, cattle were returned to the first paddock, which had recovered and was ready for another round of grazing.

Determining the number of animals that each acre of alfalfa will support in a grazing system is a difficult process. The number of animals per acre can be increased as alfalfa becomes more productive beyond the first year of stand life and as the management skills of the farm operator improve. A conservative suggested is two to three dairy cows or three to five stockers per acre during the early part of the grazing season.

The number of animals per acre is normally reduced when alfalfa production declines, such as during the typical mid-summer slump period. It is very important to closely monitor grazing to prevent overgrazing. Overgrazing can force animals to consume more supplement, if one is supplied, increasing production costs. Overgrazing also may force animals to eat the basal stems which are not very nutritious, thus limiting animal gain. Severe overgrazing also could damage the crowns of the alfalfa plants.

Undergrazing, on the other hand, can lead to uneven grazing. When unevenly grazed, the remaining plants become larger and less palatable. When the field is grazed again, the animals once more will favor the young tender plants. This in effect reduces the productive acreage unless the older, larger plants are clipped periodically.

One or more "sacrifice" paddocks also enhance a grazing program where alfalfa is the main forage. A sacrifice paddock is an area, preferably with grass sod, that can be used to hold animals during wet weather or to allow adequate regrowth of the alfalfa paddocks. Hay may be fed in sacrifice paddocks to keep pasture growing at an optimum rate.

Alfalfa Grazing Period

Alfalfa or alfalfa-grass mixtures can be grazed throughout the growing season in most areas, or can be used for grazing during only selected seasons.

Spring grazing:

- Grazing alfalfa for several weeks in the very early spring delays hay making until weather is better. Begin grazing when alfalfa is about six inches tall, managing the animals so that the plants are not overgrazed and maintain some leaf area. As the alfalfa growth begins to exceed animal consumption (usually during May), periodically reduce the size of pasture area being grazed. This decreases the amount of forage available to the animals and reduces waste. In addition, it establishes staggered pasture heights for rotational grazing throughout the rest of the season. Harvest the excess, ungrazed alfalfa as hay or silage.

Summer grazing:

- Alfalfa can be difficult to harvest for hay during July and August if top growth has been slowed by drought. Grazing may be an attractive alternative to alfalfa hay harvesting during this period.

Rotational grazing during the summer will seldom harm the stand. Grazing alfalfa during times of moisture stress does not have the adverse effects to the degree it does when grazing under normal or wet conditions. Grazing is an excellent way to use alfalfa and provide high quality forage during the dry summer months in what normally would be considered the "summer slump" period.

Fall grazing:

- Fall alfalfa growth usually is slowed or stopped by a series of light frosts, rather than by one single heavy killing freeze. Forage quality of fall growth is excellent. Weather conditions normally make alfalfa hay difficult to cure at this time, so grazing becomes an alternative method of harvesting. Removing this fall growth also may reduce the severity of the alfalfa weevil the following spring.

However, it is important not to graze too hard within five to six weeks of the first killing frost. While the stubble height or cutting height is not of great significance during the summer, it becomes an important factor when fall grazing. Leave some stubble on the field to support any growth that may occur before a killing frost and to hold snow to protect alfalfa from heaving. Leave at least a 4-inch stubble!

Season-long grazing:

- Grazing has a reputation for shortening the life of an alfalfa stand, compared to harvesting for hay. However, this is largely a misconception because there are management techniques that can take advantage of the benefits of grazing alfalfa, while reducing some of the potentially harmful effects. Follow the suggestions for spring grazing, outline above, to initiate season-long alfalfa grazing. Alfalfa should be allowed to recover for about 28 to 35 days between grazings. Rotational grazing for short grazing periods of 1 to 2 days with the long recovery period of approximately 35 days is the major key to season-long grazing, while still maintaining stands. Avoid grazing during wet weather when alfalfa is particularly susceptible to soil compaction and crown damage.

Managing Against Bloat When Grazing Alfalfa

Exceeding The Speed Limit, Or Harvesting Alfalfa In The Fall

Dr. Marvin Hall
Penn State

Whether we agree with it or not, the maximum speed limit in most states is 65 mph.

Why should we drive within the speed limit? Some Logical reasons readily come to mind. The risks of receiving a speeding ticket, being involved in an accident, and bodily injury or even death of the vehicle's occupants increase with speed.

So why would anyone exceed the speed limit and expose themselves to these risks? I suppose because we, as a society, are in a hurry to get wherever it is that we are going! We are willing to accept additional risk just for the chance of arriving at our destination sooner than if we drove within the speed limit.

Managing alfalfa stands in the fall is really very similar to deciding whether or not to exceed the speed limit. Both involve the continuous assessment of the benefits and risks associated with your actions.

For example, you probably wouldn't break the speed limit if you knew that the police were waiting just down the road looking for speeders. The risk of a ticket would be greater than the benefits of speeding. Likewise, you probably wouldn't take a harvest in late September if you knew that a very cold and open (no snow cover) winter was waiting just ahead.

The risk of losing the alfalfa stand would be greater than the benefits of fall harvesting, just like speeding, must be assessed in each situation to determine if the risks are greater than the benefits.

The benefits of fall harvesting change continually depending on the amount of forage needed and the price of purchased forage. In a drought year, alfalfa is likely to be scarce and expensive. In this situation, the benefits of taking a fall harvest may be great enough to completely ignore the risk to stand health or life. Likewise, in a year when the barns and silos are full of quality alfalfa, then the benefits of taking a fall harvest are much less than the risks.

Just as there are precautions which reduce your risks when exceeding the speed limit, there are also precautions which can reduce the risk to alfalfa stand loss when harvesting in the fall.

- Age of stand: Older alfalfa stands are more likely to winter kill or suffer winter injury following a fall harvest than younger alfalfa stands.
- Variety: Alfalfa varieties with moderate resistance to several diseases and sufficient winterhardiness have greater tolerance to stress from fall harvesting than less disease resistant or winterhardy varieties.
- Soil pH and fertility: Adequate soil pH and fertility minimizes the risk of fall harvesting by allowing alfalfa plants to develop properly and be healthier.
- Soil drainage: Alfalfa on well-drained soils is less likely to suffer winter injury than alfalfa on poorly-drained soils.
- Harvest frequency: Alfalfa harvest schedules which do not allow the alfalfa plant to flower once during the season, predisposes the plant to winter injury.
- Fall cutting height: Leaving six to eight inches of stubble when taking a fall harvest will reduce the risk of winter injury.

The decision to take a fall harvest is not always as simple as the decision to exceed the speed limit. However, when making either decision, understanding and assessing both the benefits and risks can be helpful in making the "best" decision.

SPECIAL REPORT

Bloat can be prevented through management practices, feeding poloxalene, or a combination of both. New grazing-type alfalfa varieties are just as likely to cause bloat as traditional hay-type varieties.

Some of the management tips include:

- Fill animals with another roughage before turning them onto alfalfa the first time. Don't allow animals to get hungry. Hungry animals may overeat and bloat when they get fresh pasture.
- Gradually (over a 5 or 6 day period) increase the time that animals have access to alfalfa pasture.
- Observe animals at least twice a day when they are turned onto alfalfa pasture. Some animals are chronic bloaters and should be watched especially close or removed from the pasture.
- Once they are use to alfalfa pasture, leave the animals on the pasture constantly, even at night.
- Extra caution should be taken during wet, cloudy period in the early spring when alfalfa is making its most rapid growth. Do not put animals onto alfalfa pasture if a heavy dew is present.
- More mature alfalfa is less likely to cause bloat. Minimize potential problems by initially turning them onto alfalfa that has reached the bloom stage.
- Begin feeding poloxalene 2 to 5 days before turning animals onto alfalfa pasture. Use higher dosages when animals are first placed on alfalfa pasture, and reduce the rate if no problems occur. Animals on lush alfalfa will require more poloxalene than on more mature alfalfa.

Make Hay From Your Pastures

Grace Truman
Extension Specialist
West Virginia University
Extension Service

You can save money this spring by using the extra growth on your pastures for hay.

The West Virginia University Extension Service offers these tips for increasing your yields and the quality of hay made from pastures:

- Apply extra fertilizer to the part of the pasture that is to be used for hay. Ask for a hay recommendation when you send in your soil sample to the soil lab for testing. If you don't get your soil tested this year, use a 60-45-45 fertilizer.
- Concentrate cattle on other pastures, and let the hay field grow. Most cool-season pastures will produce twice as much feed during April and May as they will in June, July, and August. Also, if you divide the pasture, the cattle can graze the grass rather closely in the spring. That will help keep clovers in fescue pastures.
- Cut hay from the pastures about the middle of May, when some of the heads of grass are showing but before seed start forming. Fescue hay cut in the middle of May has about 10 percent crude protein content. When the hay is cut the last of May, the protein content drops to about 7.5 percent.

Making hay from pasture provides other benefits. The mowing kills many spring weeds. The extra growth of grass and clover helps "crowd out" weed growth. New, tender regrowth after mowing also provides high-quality feed. And more forage means it takes fewer acres for each cow.

Plan now to get a soil test kit from your county extension office. Be sure to state on the information sheet that you want a recommendation for hay. The hay recommendation is higher than for pasture because all the hay is removed from the land. When the land is pastured, some manure returns to the land.

Here Are Some Questions, Answers About Alfalfa Seeding Rates

David E. Hurst,
Research Agronomist,
W-L Research, Inc.

Q: There has been some discussion recently that alfalfa seeding rate recommendations (12-18 lbs/acre) have been too high. Several public and private alfalfa agronomists have suggested that seeding rates above 15 lbs/acre rarely produce thicker stands, and that seeding rates of 10-12 lbs/acre usually produce adequate stands. Will these lower seeding rate recommendations (10-12 lbs/acre) produce adequate stands?

A: For some growers, 12 pounds/acre is adequate, but for most seeding situations a 15-18 pound rate is still a good recommendation. It is true that under ideal conditions 12 pounds per acre would be adequate. In a perfect world the soil moisture would be adequate, the seedbed would be ideal, good seeding equipment would be used and the weather conditions after seeding would be ideal. Unfortunately, one or more of these things usually isn't perfect, and it is wise to seed at a little higher rate to insure good stand establishment.

Q: How much of an effect does the type of seeding equipment have on stand establishment?

A: Equipment used is a key factor in successful alfalfa establishment. There are many uncontrollable factors (e.g. weather) in establishment, so it is important to control those variables that you can in order to improve seeding success. Good seeding equipment will plant ¼ " to 1" deep and firm the soil around the seed either with press wheels or with a cultipacker. If seeds are planted deeper than 1 inch or are not pressed firmly into the soil, there is a good chance that the seeds will not germinate or emerge. Even with good seeding equipment adequate moisture conditions only about 60% of the seeds will emerge. This percentage will be much lower if a grain drill with no cultipacker or press wheels is used.

Q: Can lower seeding rates be used if irrigation is available to the grower?

A: Unpredictable dry periods after seeding can cause germination problems. With irrigation, it is possible to reduce seeding rates slightly since moisture will not be limiting. Be very careful, however, not to overwater the establishing stand. Irrigation is not as uniform as rainfall and wet areas in the field are ideal for soil-borne seedling disease organisms such as rhizoctonia, pythium and phytophthora root rot.

Q: Can new seedings be "thickened-up" if the initial seeding comes up too thin?

A: This is very difficult. Even when a thin stand is recognized early, any attempt to thicken the stand usually fails. The new seedlings will be outcompeted for both light and moisture by the established seedlings and usually die shortly after emergence. If there are patchy areas in the field with very few seedlings, it may be possible to reseed those areas by disking the poor areas and reseeding them as soon as possible. Early reseeding is very important to take advantage of available moisture and also to get the new seedlings up so they can be harvested with the rest of the field.

Q: Should the seeding rate be adjusted if alfalfa is established with a companion crop?

A: No. The alfalfa seeding rate should remain the same. The seeding rate of the companion crop should be lower (e.g. 1-2 bu/acre for oats) when planting with alfalfa as opposed to planting it alone for grain. If a companion crop is seeded with alfalfa, it should be removed early to allow the alfalfa a good chance to get established.

Time to Rotate Out Of Alfalfa? Count The Stems

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Penn State
Extension Forage Specialist

If you are starting to make plans for next year's crop rotation, then the decision to keep or plow up an alfalfa field because it has a thin stand is extremely important.

The estimated cost of seeding an alfalfa field is more than $200 per acre. This expense, combined with relatively low production during the seeding year, means that the decision to take an alfalfa field out of production can be unnecessarily costly if the field could have maintained production for another year.

Typically the magic number of plants that indicated that it was time to rotate out of alfalfa has been 4-5 plants per square foot. However, depending on fertility and weed invasion, alfalfa stands with five plants per square foot can yield as much as a stand with 10 or 15 plants per square foot.

The correlation between plants per square foot and yield is very low since individual alfalfa plants respond to decreasing stand density by producing more stems. Increased stems per plant compensates for fewer plants and maintains the yield. Recent research in Wisconsin by Dr. Dennis Cosgrove indicates that stem number rather than plant number is a more accurate determination of when to plow up an alfalfa stand.

According to Cosgrove's work, a better indication of the productivity of an alfalfa stand is the number of stems per square foot. Cosgrove suggests that fields with 55 or more stem per square foot produce maximum yields. As the stem number declines to 40 stems or less per square foot, yields are reduced by 25 percent. He suggests that this is when alfalfa fields begin to lose profitability and should be rotated out of alfalfa.

Unfortunately, this technique of counting stems works well if the decision to reseed is made during the growing season. The technique does not work, however, when a decision must be made early in the spring after a hard winter. A decision at that time of year to rotate out of alfalfa must be based on the 4-5 plants per square foot threshold. There is still time this fall to utilize this stem counting method as an aid, in your decision-making process.

STRATEGIES FOR EXTENDING THE GRAZING SEASON FROM PENN STATE AGRONOMY FACTS 41

Several strategies can be employed to supply forage into the fall or early winter and effectively extend the grazing season by 60 to 90 days, thus reducing the need for stored feeds. These strategies can be categorized into two major groups: 1) stockpiling (conserving cool-season forages in late summer for use in the fall and winter), or 2) utilizing forage crops that continue to grow into the fall and early winter.

Stockpiling: Not all cool-season species are adapted to stockpiling because most species reduce growth in the fall because of shorter day lengths and/or lose leaves (quality) after being frosted. Tall fescue and birdsfoot trefoil are two forage species which are suited to stockpile management because they continue to grow into the fall and do not lose leaves as readily as other cool-season species after frost.

Tall fescue: Tall fescue is a deep-rooted, long-lived, sod-forming grass that spreads by short underground stems called rhizomes. It is drought resistant and will maintain itself under rather limited fertility conditions. Animals readily graze tall fescue during the fall, but show some reluctance to graze it during the summer months of July and August. Some of this reduced summer palatability, which results in poor animal performance, is associated with the presence of a fungus in the plant (endophytic). Endophyte-free varieties are now available and are recommended for new seedings. Tall fescue is the best adapted cool-season grass for stockpiling Grazing management: Tall fescue can be part of a forage program but should not be all of it. Legumes with tall fescue improve animal performance and increase forage production during the summer. Tall fescue will withstand closer grazing and more abuse than most cool-season grasses. But it can be overgrazed to the point that vigor and production are reduced. Don't graze closer than three or four inches, and allow at least 30 days in mid-summer for the tall fescue to recover.

To stockpile tall fescue, don't graze it from mid- or late August through mid-October. Cattle and sheep perform less than optimally on it during this period. Fertilize with 50 lb nitrogen/acre and allow the growth to accumulate for use in the fall or winter.

Stockpiling and nitrogen fertilizer allows accumulation of forage, however, this results in low tiller density, increased winter injury, and slow recovery in the spring. The most important thing to remember is that while stockpiling can provide large quantities of herbage for late fall and early winter grazing, it will also delay recovery in the spring. At modest rates of nitrogen fertilization, stands of tall fescue will not deteriorate as fast as other cool-season grasses under stockpiling.

For more information about tall fescue, refer to Tall Fescue, Penn State Agronomy Facts 28.

Birdsfoot trefoil: Birdsfoot trefoil is a perennial legume adapted to production on poorly drained, low pH soils. It can reseed itself, is resistant to Phytophthora root rot and numerous alfalfa insects, responds well to fertilization, and does not cause bloat in animals. These characteristics have expanded its use in the northern United States and southern Canada where the production of other forage legumes is limited. Birdsfoot trefoil is well suited for stockpiling since it holds its leaves at maturity and after frost, thus maintaining a relatively high level of quality.

Adapted varieties: About 25 varieties of birdsfoot trefoil are available in the United States and Canada. Birdsfoot trefoil varieties are generally characterized by growth habit into two types, Empire and European. Both types are referred to as "broadleaf" trefoils.

Empire-type birdsfoot trefoils are better adapted for grazing situations than the European types because they have fine stems, prostrate growth, and indeterminate growth habit. The Empire types grow slower during establishment and regrow more slowly following harvest than the European types. "Dawn" and "Empire" are high-yielding, Empire-type varieties that have performed well in Pennsylvania tests.

European-type birdsfoot trefoils are better adapted to hay production because they are more erect, establish faster, and regrow faster after harvest than the Empire type.

Grazing management: To stockpile birdsfoot trefoil, avoid grazing between Sept. 1 and the first killing frost. This period is needed to accumulate root reserves that improve winter survival and growth the following spring. The forage that accumulates during the stockpiling period can be grazed anytime after a killing frost.

Refer to Birdsfoot Trefoil, Penn State Agronomy Facts 20, for more information about production and management of this forage species.

Fall growing forage crops: The growth of some forage species is not as adversely affected by cooler fall weather and shorter day lengths as are many cool-season forages. The species which seem to grow best in the fall are tall fescue, prairie grass, perennial ryegrass, and certain brassica crops. These species can provide a valuable feed supply for extending the grazing season.

Prairiegrass: Prairiegrass is a tall growing perennial grass that is suited to well drained soils with medium to high fertility levels and a pH of 6.0 or greater. It is a type of bromegrass, but is different from smooth bromegrass in that it does not have rhizomes and it produces seed heads in each growth period, especially during the summer. Herbage and immature seedheads of prairie grass are highly palatable. It is an excellent grass for providing forage during droughts and for extending the grazing season well into the fall in Pennsylvania.

Follow These Steps To Rotational Grazing

AGRONOMY FACTS 43

A well-managed pasture program can often be the most economical way to provide forage to ruminant animals.

It is estimated that on many dairy farms where pasture makes up a significant portion of the forage program, feed costs can be reduced by $.50 to $1 per day per cow during the grazing season.

However, to optimize the production and utilization of pasture, as well as animal performance, careful planning and sound management are important. Knowing your animals, plants and soils, and being able to respond to their needs is a skill that must be developed if rotational grazing is to be successful on your farm.

Developing a pasture system that utilizes your land resources and fits in with your total animal, forage and crop program is an important first step in pasture management. A major goal in pasture management is to provide quality pasture for the grazing animals throughout the grazing season.

The first step into rotational grazing is to determine the forage requirements of the herd or flock. Dry matter forage intake varies by animal species and class. The concept of animal units gives a much better measure of pasture required, as compared to using animal numbers. One animal unit (AU) is based on the daily forage intake of one 1,000-pound dry cow (about 25 pounds of dry forage per day).

The next step is to estimate how many acres will be needed throughout the grazing season.

Estimating the number of acres required to pasture a herd or flock depends not only on the feed requirements of the animals but also on the available forage produced. Pasture growth is dependent upon plant species, soil characteristics, topography, fertilization, temperature, and other factors.

The best way to manage this situation is to not use a set rotational scheme, but move animals to those paddocks which have reached their optimum available pasture. Keep animals off a particular paddock until it reaches its desired optimum available pasture.

The third step: estimate how large each paddock should be.

Paddock size depends on the AU in the herd, the amount of available pasture at the beginning of grazing, and the desired grazing period. Available pasture refers to that present in a paddock at the start of grazing minus the amount present when the animals are removed from the paddock. Typical Pennsylvania pastures, depending on density of plants, have about 300 pounds of pasture.

The last step: estimate number of paddocks needed.

The number of paddocks needed for a rotational grazing system will depend on the number of days the animals graze in a paddock and the maximum summer rest period needed.

Spring management usually involves diverting some of the paddocks out of the rotation scheme and using the forage for hay or silage. This effectively shortens the rest period between grazings and improves utilization of rapid spring growth.

Lactating dairy cows need consistent quality forage; therefore, the grazing period may be anywhere from .5 to 2 days. Beef cows, brood ewes and most other ruminants do not require as consistent a quality forage and a grazing period of 3 or more days may suffice.

the winter persistence of prairie grass. It will persist for four to six years in Pennsylvania if properly managed. Forage quality of prairie grass compares well with other cool-season grasses but is more palatable.

Adapted varieties: "Matua" is the only cultivar of prairie grass that is currently sold in the United States. This variety was developed under New Zealand grazing conditions and has been very productive in Pennsylvania. Other prairie grass varieties are being evaluated for persistence and productivity by the USDA-Pasture Laboratory and Penn State; however, none of these varieties is marketed commercially in Pennsylvania at this time.

Grazing management: Prairiegrass is an ideal grass for grazing systems because of its potential for earlier spring grazing and its fall growth can effectively extend the grazing season by as much as two months over traditional cool-season grass species. Fall yields of nearly 3.5 tons/acre are possible. In addition, because seed heads are palatable, it is not necessary to mow them off to maintain animal intake as may be needed with other grasses. Yields of nearly 7 tons/acre have been achieved when harvesting prairie grass for silage.

In established prairiegrass stands, delaying the first spring grazing will reduce recovery rate and lower the yield potential of the next cutting. Under normal weather conditions, about 25 to 30 days of regrowth is sufficient between harvests. This period is a good balance between yield and quality of prairie grass. Generally, during this time, new shoots have developed at the base of the plant and harvesting or grazing will allow more light to reach the shoots and to stimulate their growth. An approximate 50-day growth period in mid-summer will allow the prairie grass seed heads to mature and drop seed during August which, in turn, will thicken the stand the following year.

Prairiegrass persists best when managed so that monthly harvests are made during the fall; spring yield and shoot density increase when multiple harvests are made in the fall. Harvesting only once in the fall (November) has caused 98 percent of the basal shoots (source for growth the following spring) to winter kill. However, when prairie grass was harvested or grazed three times during the fall only 35 percent of the basal shoots were winter killed. Compromise is needed with regard to fall harvesting because late fall grazing reduces slightly prairie grass vigor the following spring and restricts early spring grazing.

Adequate nitrogen fertilization is essential for maximizing prairie grass growth in the fall. Nitrogen applications of 50 lb/acre are recommended after each harvest and in early fall.

For more information about the production and management of prairie grass, refer to Prairie Grass, Penn State Agronomy Facts 39.

Forage brassicas: Brassicas are annual crops which continue to grow during the fall and into the winter. They are highly productive and digestible and contain relatively high levels of crude protein. They can be grazed 80 to 150 days after seeding, depending on the species and weather. In addition, some varieties lend themselves to stockpiling.

Species and varieties: Several brassica species can provide forage for grazing during the fall. These include:

• Kale — The stemless variety "Premier" has consistently survived winters in central Pennsylvania, whereas other varieties of kale usually have winter-killed in December.

• Rape — Growth of rape slows or ceases at maturity until leaves senesce and die.

Varieties differ in the time this occurs. For instance, "Rangi" rape retains its leaves longer than most varieties, which makes it more suitable for stockpiling and winter grazing than other rape varieties.

• Swede — The variety "Calder" has been cold hardy in central Pennsylvania and thus ideal for stockpiling for late-fall or early-winter grazing. However, in general, all swede varieties are recommended for late-fall grazing.

• Turnip or Turnip Hybrids — Pennsylvania studies have shown that "Forage Star" turnip is more cold tolerant and retains its leaves longer in the fall than other turnip varieties. Turnip can accumulate dry matter in October as fast as field corn does in August. Growing "out of season" (October and November) makes turnip a valuable crop for late fall grazing.

Grazing management: Proper grazing management is important to optimize the true potential of these crops. Strip grazing small areas of brassicas provides the most efficient utilization.

Rape is more easily managed for multiple (generally more than two) grazings than are the other brassica species. Approximately six to ten inches of stubble should remain after the firstgrazingof rape; this practice promotes rapid regrowth. Regrowth of rape may be grazed at four-week intervals. On the final grazing, the plants should be grazed close to ground level.

When turnips are grazed twice, the first grazing should remove only their tops. Turnip regrowth is initiated at the top of the root, so this part of the plant should not be removed until the second and final grazing. Like rape, regrowth of turnips can be sufficient to graze within four weeks of the first grazing.

Yield and nutritional value: Dry matter digestibility at maturity generally exceeds 90 percent for all plant parts except kale stems. Unlike perennial forage crops, the dry matter digestibility of brassicas does not decrease markedly with increasing plant maturity. This characteristic makes them ideal for stockpiling. However, ruminant diets should not contain more than 75 percent brassica forage because the fiber content is too low for maintenance of proper rumen activity. With their high digestibility and low fiber content, brassicas actually should be considered as "concentrates" rather than "forage" in nutritional planning for livestock.

For more information about brassicas, refer to Use of Brassica Crops to Extend the Grazing Season, Penn State Agronomy Facts 33.

Small grains: The use of winter cereal crops such as wheat, barley, rye, or triticale can provide fall or early winter grazing opportunities. However, certain management practices need to be modified from what is normally done for grain production. When small grains are to be used for grazing, plant them three to four weeks earlier than for grain production. Increase the seeding rate to 3 bushels/acre and apply nitrogen at the rate of 40 pounds/acre at planting time.

If the small grains are being planted only for pasture (with no subsequent grain harvest), there may be some benefit to mixing small grains species. This has been beneficial in the southeast United States, where small grains pastures are quite common. Mixing species of rye, wheat, barley, or triticale can help extend the grazing period and reduce the tendency for a strong peak growth period in the spring.

Grazing management: With adequate fall moisture, grazing should be available from October through December and then again in early spring. One acre of properly fertilized and managed small grains should support one animal unit (1,000 lb animal) on a limited grazing basis.

Stocking rate and time of grazing will be somewhat determined by the intended use of the crop. If you are planning to take a silage or grain harvest, grazing should only be moderate. Heavy grazing can reduce grain yields. Moderate grazing in the fall will not result in significant silage or grain losses provided that moisture and soil fertility are adequate. In fact, fall pasturing can be beneficial where the small grain was seeded early and has made excessive growth.

Spring grazing may be started when growth resumes. If a grain or silage crop is to be harvested, grazing should be discontinued when the plants start to grow erect, just before jointing (growth stage 6). Small grains plants will be injured by grazing at any time after their growing points are above the ground.

Temporary electric fencing should provide a practical way to manage these pastures. Although small grains can be continuously grazed, a rotational or strip grazing practice may allow a higher carrying capacity (less wastage from trampling).

Small grains pasture is lush, high in protein, and low in fiber during most of the fall grazing period. Crude protein levels normally range from 15 percent to 34 percent of dry matter, making this forage an excellent protein supplement for many classes of livestock.

Animal health precautions: Grass tetany can occur when small grains forage is grazed by cows about to calve or those which have recently calved. This usually occurs in the spring. It is recommended that animal diets be supplemented with a mineral mix containing magnesium. Lactating dairy cows that are grazing small grain pasture should receive an additional 1 ounce of magnesium oxide/cow/day.

There is a risk of nitrate poisoning if animals graze rapidly growing and recently fertilized small grains pasture. Avoid this situation by applying nitrogen fertilizer at planting time or well before the intended grazing period.

Although rare, bloat may also be a health risk when animals graze small grains. This most likely will occur when animals are first turned onto pasture in early spring and gorge themselves with the lush forage. Bloat can be prevented by feeding some stored forage just before turning the animals onto the pasture.
